Kiwanis Help In 'Neighbor' Policy Asked By Roosevelt

President Praises Clubs' Work for Children in Talk to 5,000.

Callen Is Elected International Head

Edwin F. Hill, of District, Is Named Candidate for Trustee Post.

The doctrine of the good neighbor has gone far in strengthening friendship between North, Central and South America, President Roosevelt told 5,000 members of Kiwanis International and their families yesterday.

"We now need to spread the same spirit in all our communities in this country," the Chief Executive asserted.

"We are now on friendly terms with all nations," he said, "but that 'good neighbor' policy should be extended to all communities within our borders. We have reached the understanding in recent years that this country is one big country and whatever is done in one part affects the other parts."

Roosevelt stood on the south porch of the White House and greeted the Kiwanians, who were on the south lawn.

He praised them for their work among the crippled children of the Nation.

Then, in a jocular mood, the Chief Executive asserted, despite reports to the contrary, he believed "such work should rest on private individuals and not on 'the poor old Government.'"

Election Held.

President Roosevelt's brief address followed a business meeting at Constitution Hall in which A. Copeland Callen, of Urbana, Ill., was elected international president by acclamation.

The secretary, Fred C. W. Parker, of Chicago, was instructed to cast unanimous ballots also for James M. Lynch, of Florence, S. C., vice president representing the United States; Frank Trafford Taylor, of St. Boniface, Manitoba, vice president representing Canada; and H. Glenn Hatfield, of Oklahoma City, Okla., for a second term as treasurer.

Six trustees are to be elected from the following eight candidates: Edwin F. Hill, of Washington, D. C.; Fred G. McAllister, of London, Ont.; Samuel F. Clabaugh, of Birmingham, Ala.; Alfred H. Syverson, of Spokane, Wash.; Harry MacDonald, of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Bennett O. Knudson, of Albert Lea, Minn.; James P. Gallagher, of Newton, Mass., and A. Q. Post, of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Events on yesterday's program, in addition to President Roosevelt's message and election of officers, were an address in the morning by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and a dinner at the Mayflower for past and present international officers, including past and present district governors.

Asks Crime War.

Hoover urged the Kiwanians to carry on a private war against crime by helping to break up alliances between criminals and crooked politicians in their home towns.

He reminded his listeners that "you get exactly the kind of government and exactly the kind of law enforcement you deman" and urged the service club units to form committees on law and order to combat any local interests which may place a restraining hand on the efforts of law enforcement officials.

He encouraged the Kiwanians to help clean up politics and said:

"There is no excuse today when the colleges are pouring out thou-

Arlington Mother, 2 Children Drown In Michigan Lake

An Arlington County mother was drowned in a futile attempt to rescue two of her daughters from the deep waters in an arm of Charlevoix Lake, near Ironton, Mich., yesterday.

Mrs. Nancy Curry Parker, 41, of 4029 Columbia pike, and her daughters, Joan Isobel, 10, and Patricia Ann, 8, lost their lives, the Associated Press reported.

Joan Isobel went to the aid of Patricia when she got beyond her depth and cried for help, the Associated Press reported. Mrs. Howard Pillsbury, at whose cottage the Parker family was visiting, went after both girls. She had all but pulled them ashore, when Mrs. Parker, frantic with anxiety, dived in the deep water. She could not swim, and sank instantly.

Mrs. Pillsbury went to her aid, too, and all four sank together for the third time. As she bobbed to the surface, Mrs. Pillsbury was rescued by occupants of a small boat.

Coast Guardsmen last night had recovered the bodies of the mother and her daughters.

Away from the cottage at the time were Charles G. Parker, the husband and father, who served in the Navy during the war and at present an accountant in the Interior Department, and two other daughters, Dorothy 13, and Ellen, 3. All were on the holiday, but Parker and the other girls had left the cottage for a hike.

ROBERT L. HAYCOCK.

Robert L. Haycock, who for the last 13 years has been assistant superintendent of public schools in charge of white elementary schools, was promoted yesterday to the post of first assistant superintendent to succeed the late Dr. Stephen E. Kramer.

Haycock received the appointment from the Board of Education, which acted on the recommendation of its personnel committee, of which Robert A. Maurer is chairman, and of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Through a reorganization of the administrative system, Haycock will retain his supervision over the elementary schools, Divisions I to IX, and in addition will have general supervision over the junior and senior high schools and Wilson Teachers College.

Under him will be two assistant superintendents yet to be appointed. One will have charge of senior high schools; the other of junior high schools. The latter post is a new one, created by the appropriation act passed by Congress just before adjournment.

Dr. Kramer, as first assistant to Dr. Ballou, directed the affairs of the junior and the senior high schools. Haycock is the first deputy to the superintendent, who also had charge of elementary schools.

Haycock is a Washington man. He received his education in the District, received his first teaching position here, and has served the local school system throughout his career. Graduating from Western High School in 1894, he entered Washington Normal School, now Wilson Teachers College, and was graduated the following year. In 1911 George Washington University conferred upon him a bachelor of arts degree and a bachelor's diploma in education. The same university bestowed on him a master of arts degree with a master's diploma in education in 1912.

The new first assistant superintendent has been in the school service for 41 years. He began as a third grade teacher at Threlkeld School in 1895. He was soon appointed to the principalship of that school. In 1903 he was transferred to the principalship of the Industrial Home School. In 1914 he was made supervising principal of the third division, which extends north of Florida avenue to Takoma Park.

Appointed in 1923.

His leadership abilities were further recognized in 1923, when he was appointed assistant superintendent in charge of all public white elementary schools in the District. For the last few years he has also had charge of nursery schools and adult education projects under the emergency education program.

Haycock is active in professional groups outside the school system. He is past president of the Federal Schoolman's Club, a life member of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association. He belongs to the District Education Association and the Washington Board of Trade. He is chairman of the official board of the West Washington Baptist Church.

Dr. Ballou said yesterday appointments to the two assistant superintendentships under Haycock will be announced by July 1. They may be made yet this week, he said.

The name of Miss Bertie Backus, assistant superintendent in charge of the character education program, which is now abandoned for lack of a Congressional appropriation, has been mentioned.

Relief Agency Of D. C. Made Permanent

Commissioners Move to Take Unit Out of Emergency Class.

174 Employes Assured of Being Retained Under Set-up.

Recognizing that the burden of caring for unemployables in the National Capital has become a permanent welfare activity, the District Commissioners yesterday moved to place the public assistance division of the welfare department on a permanent basis.

The characterization of the direct relief as "emergency" thus will be dropped.

About 174 employes of the division will be given more substantial assurance of retaining their jobs, after dismissal of the 125 forced by Congress, and some of them may get slight pay increases.

The pay raises will be in the small-salary brackets, almost entirely. For instance, case workers now in the District relief organization get $1,320 and $1,500. The classified act provides a salary of $1,620.

Made Local Problem.

In the beginning all forms of direct relief were administered by the same agency, with the Federal Government bearing by far the greater portion of the expense. Last winter, however, all Federal aid for unemployables in the States and the District was cut off, and relief was made a local problem.

The reorganized administrative set-up actually will be less expensive than the present staff because of the limitation to $200,000 for salaries in the public assistance division appropriation.

Whereas the annual cost is now $411,000, it will be only $232,000 for the next fiscal year. The $200,000 will come from the appropriation act and $32,000 from the Social Security Board.

Details Not Completed.

District officials will seek to rush through the new order within a few days so that it may become effective July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

Details of the new set-up are yet to be worked out and must be approved formally by the Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission, but it is expected to become effective by July 1. The plan was approved in principle yesterday at a conference in the office of Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board.

All jobs in the unemployable relief administration and in the old-age security staff are to be classified in accordance with civil service ratings, but the employes will not be brought under civil service. However, in filling future vacancies, the Commissioners will have to select applicants form lists of eligibles furnished by the Civil Service Commission if available.

The Disrtict emergency relief organization was established two years ago by the District Commissioners to administer FERA funds. The old-age security staff was organized only last year after passage of the organic act.

The detailed classification of the 160 jobs in the relief staff and the 14 jobs in the Social Security Administration will be submitted by the welfare diretcor to the District Personnel Board, of which Maj. Daniel J. Donovan is chairman. This board will make its recommendations to the Commisisoners, who in turn will file their report for approval with the Civil Service Commission.

Cool Spell's End Today Predicted

A gradual end of what has been one of the coolest periods in the month of June since the Weather Bureau first began compiling records was predicted by the forecaster last night.

The temperature, which sank to a minimum of 56.6 at 7 a. m. yesterday, and climbed to a maximum of 60 at 2 p. m., will rise about 10 degrees above yesterday's figures through today officials asserted. They added that there would be no repetition of yesterday's drizzle.

Lowest recorded temperatures for June 24 was 46, in 1902. Temperatures of 52 were recorded on the corresponding dates in 1915 and 1918. Record low temperature for June is 43, registered June 2, 1879.

Cause of the cold wave, observers said, was an area of high pressure from the interior of Canada, probably in the region of Manitoba.

Despairing Husband Ends Life After Wife Kills 3 Babies, Self

Madison, Me., June 24 (U.P.).—Apparently driven to despair because his wife murdered their three youngest children, then took her own life at a "cookie party" Sunday, Erwin G. Jones, 40-year-old radiator repairman, formerly of Detroit, today drove to the scene of the tragedy and committed suicide.

While his two surviving children drove into town with his automobile, Jones borrowed a neighbor's sedan, drove to the oatfield, where he had found the bullet-riddled bodies of his wife and three children and ended his own life with carbon monoxide fumes. The fumes were forced into the car with a hose from the exhaust through the back window.

A neighbor found Jones' body. The car's motor still was running.

On the windshield, Jones had left a farewell note in which he gave directions for the care of his two surviving children—Charles, 15, and Shirley, 13. Shirley had accompanied her father to the oatfield —500 yards to the rear of the Jones home—Sunday when the triple murder-suicide was discovered.

Jones' suicide followed by less than 24 hours the burial of his wife, Mrs. Annie Wallace Jones, 34; their twin sons, Robert and Edward, 4, and their baby, Norman, 2.

Said to have been mentally deranged because of poor health, Mrs. Jones, a native of Woodstock, N. B., had taken her three babies to the oat-field on the pretense of a "cookie party."

There, she spread out a blanket and as the children munched on cookies, Mrs. Jones bound and blindfolded the twins, tied them by the waist to their baby brother and then shot each through the temple with a rifle. She sent a fourth bullet into her own head.

Roosevelt 'Kept Faith,' Robinson Says; Planks to Pledge New Deal Continuance; South Maps Battle for Two-Thirds Rule

Philadelphia, June 24.—The first real fight in the Democratic National Convention was looming tonight as delegates gathered to hear Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, permanent chairman, speak. The fight is expected to break out on the floor tomorrow, when the rules committee will recommend that the 104-year-old two-thirds rule on nominations be abolished. A preliminary battle occurred today before the committee, which finally adjourned without acting. The committee had agreed to meet at 10:15 a. m. tomorrow and to vote on the two-thirds rule question not later than 11:30 a. m. The report will go before the convention at the session scheduled for noon.

It is almost certain that a minority report insisting on retention of the rule will be brought in. This will precipitate a floor debate, breaking the monotony of long speeches and vaudeville acts by entertainers brought here for the purpose. James A. Farley, national chairman, has announced that any delegate who wishes to speak on the rule will be permitted to do so.

Only Minor Business.

No business except minor routine matters came before the convention this afternoon. The program consisted almost entirely of professional entertainment.

If the convention runs on schedule, virtually all of the real business, except the nomination of candidates, will be transacted tomorrow morning. The program calls for the report of the resolutions committee and adoption of the platform tomorrow night. Nominating speeches for President Roosevelt, possibly one from each of the 53 delegations, will be heard Friday and the President will be renominated at night. Vice President Garner will be renominated shortly after noon Saturday if the program is followed.

Besides the committee fight on the two-third rule, another unpleasant element was injected into the convention when share-croppers, marching in a pouring rain, picketed the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, headquarters of the national committee. The attack by the picketers was directed at Robinson and at conditions in Arkansas.

Promised Hearing.

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, said that Robinson had agreed to a joint State and Federal investigation of conditions in his State and that the sharecroppers, represented by Gardner Jackson, had been told that the resolutions committee would hear them and would consider a plank approving organization of all workers, including agricultural workers. He said that, in spite of this assurance, they made no appearance before the committee, but picketed the headquarters instead.

If a minority report on the two-thirds rule is given the convention, it is expected to be presented by Representative Eugene Cox, of Georgia, who was one of the most vehement opponents of the change in the committee hearing. At the outset of the hearing Judge Beeman Strong, of Texas, attempted to adjourn the committee without any action being taken. This move was blocked by a large majority. The attitude of the committee clearly indicated that although there probably will be a stiff fight by the

Mother Falls Dead In District Church As Daughter Weds

Death came to a Washington mother yesterday as she sat in a pew in a fashionable Chevy Chase church during the marriage ceremony of her daughter.

Mrs. Van Buren Hillyard, 77, complained of being ill a short time before the service began and died while her daughter, Ruth, a third grade teacher at Seaton School, unaware of the tragedy, was taking the vows that made her Mrs. Erskine H. Rupp, bride of a Washington business man.

Mr. Hillyard, who with Mrs. Hillyard, a long-time resident of Washington, recently celebrated his golden wedding anniversary in their home at 1116 Euclid street northwest, is seriously ill in Garfield Hospital and was unable to attend the ceremony, held in the Chevy Chase Baptist Church, at 5671 Western avenue northwest.

The Rev. Edward O. Clark, who performed the ceremony, said he heard a gasp from among the more than 80 wedding witnesses as he was reciting the final nuptial prayer. It was believed to have been Mrs. Hillyard's dying gasp.

The tragedy occurred after the bride had been given in marriage by her brother-in-law, George B. Fraser, of Chevy Chase.

Platform Is Completed; Will Be Submitted to Delegates Today.

Terse Document Lauds President

By Robert C. Albright.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 25 (Thursday). At an early hour this morning a Democratic resolutions sub-committee was putting finishing touches on a briefly worded party platform devoted chiefly to a eulogy of New Deal policies and pledges of their continuance.

Their work was virtually completed; in fact, the picked sub-committee, dominated by United States Senators of Administration sympathies, had little to do but approve what was laid before them. Such differences as developed, apparently, were over minor questions of language.

Full details of the platform may not become known until it is approved by the National Committee tonight, after a summary approval by a full resolutions committee this morning. It was learned on good authority, however, that much of the manuscript is devoted to a recital of what the New Deal has done and a promise to continue doing it.

A "sound money" plank, that evades the issue of gold convertibility; a strong monopoly plank, that does not go as far as Senator William E. Borah wanted in preventing second degree holding companies; a farm plank of general nature; pledges to labor of collective bargaining rights, and a foreign relations plank that affirms the sanctity of treaties and promises co-operation, but without international involvement, were believed to be a few of the subjects briefly touched on.

Terseness Is Object.

Terseness is the accomplished purpose of the platform. "It will be so short that it won't take you 20 minutes to read it," remarked Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, as he left the conference room early this morning.

At the head of the table sat Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman, who sounded out the President's views in detail before he left Washington, and last night gathered a group around him which can be counted on to give President Roosevelt what he wants.

A full day of routine hearings preceded the sub-committee session, as labor leaders, farm spokesmen, economists, women's organizations, Townsendites and one hobo presented the resolutions committee with a mass of testimony that would take a week to digest.

The resolutions sub-committee proposes to present their completed product to the full committee at 11:30 a. m. today. Just what will be done with the mountain of recommendations presented yesterday is undetermined, but it is safe to say most of it will not go into the platform.

Wagner Holds Trumps.

Efforts to scotch reports that the platform has been prepared in advance were continued by Senator Wagner, who did not deny, however, that he knows pretty much, but won't say, what the platform will be. It is reported that he has several variations of some major planks, any one of which the President will accept—that he listens patiently to what sub-committee members have to say, then he lays down trump cards.

The platform drafting group is overwhelmingly New Deal, although there are one or two independents in the group who will assert themselves.

Senators having their thumbs in the platform soup, besides Chairman Wagner, are Walsh, of Massachusetts; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Hatch, of New Mexico; Black, of Alabama; Bulkley, of Ohio, and Byrnes, of South Carolina.

Quakers Yearn for Sober Days, But Roman Holiday Races On

By Felix Morley.
Editor of The Post.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Heavy rain, interferring with the outdoor activities scheduled in connection with the Democratic Convention, today emphasized that this gathering is just a grand carnival in all its outward aspects, and only a significant political meeting for those who can see beneath the surface.

Low-brow delegates who were kept from the ball game by wet grounds, and high-brows unable to patronize neighboring country clubs for the same reason, alike disposed themselves to kill the long summer afternoon according to their varying tastes. Unfortunately for those who chose to sleep, perhaps unfortunately for the tavern patronizers, the higher-ups had already wasted a good deal of the delegates' day for them.

This morning's meeting lured practically all the ladies, and a surprising proportion of men, by the item on the program promising "introducing of celebrities of opera, stage, screen and radio." The gathering scheduled for noon was finally called to order shortly before half-past one, finding a large number of very bored Democrats fully deserving of the postponed treat.

Beginning to Pall.

While I had intended to avoid this session I was lured to it by an offer to ride there with a Pennsylvania delegate, better known in Washington than in the State he represents, who has access to the huge fleet of official cars. These go tearing through stop lights and everything else, behind motorcycle cops sounding an incessant siren. It is an exciting and somewhat hitlersque experience, but one which is beginning to pall on Philadelphia.

Apparently any delegate in good standing can obtain a ride with an escort, and as there are some 1,500 delegates, sharing the 1,100 votes by a formula better understood than described, the song of the siren is frequently heard in the land. Those Philadelphians who do not have their fingers crossed are using them to count the number of days until the city returns to normalcy, a quaint old expression still in use here.

Once stranded in the wilds of West Philadelphia, where the convention hall is located, one naturally seeks alternatives to hear Eddie Dowling read from the rostrum a parody entitled "Five Blind Men," on the deficiencies of the Supreme Court. Senator Barkley was far livelier. So I improved the raining hour by attending the opening hearings of the resolutions committee, at which all and sundry are invited to make suggestions which may, and more likely may not, be incorporated into the party platform when it eventually appears.

These hearings are held upstairs in the Convention Hall and the visitor finds his way by following signs which read: "Office of Concessions," with an arrow underneath. These concessions, however, have nothing to do with what Senator Bob Wagner talked over the

Chance to Serve On Committee Given Women

Feminine Alternates for Platform Unit Approved by Resolution.

Philadelphia, June 24.—The 219 women delegates to the Democratic National Convention and the 300 alternates are starry-eyed with a new-found happiness because they have succeeded in getting what might be called a look-in on the platform committee. Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana introduced the following resolution upon the floor of the convention:

"Resolved, That in addition to the designation of member of the committee on platform and resolutions, each State, district and Territory shall name an alternate member of that committee who shall be of the opposite sex of the member designated."

The resolution was carried and all States that were in caucus proceeded at once to name women alternates in addition to the delegate already chosen as member of the resolutions committee.

The following States already have sent in the names of such alternates:

Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Arkansas; Miss Harriet Elliot, North Carolina; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mississippi; Mrs. Denni Johnson, Colorado; Mrs. Mark Anthony, Tennessee; Mrs. John Garland Pollard, Virginia; Mrs. Bibb Graves, Alabama; Mrs. Lucretia Del Valle Grady, California; Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, Michigan.

It is generally conceded that the idea of approaching the problem of representation for women on the resolutions committee in this way

Allen Demands An Amendment For Ballot Here

Philadelphia, June 24.—An ardent appeal for a constitutional amendment giving voteless District of Columbia residents a voice in Congress and a say in Presidential elections today was presented to the Democratic resolutions committee by Commissioner George E. Allen.

The District delegation was backed up in its plea by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, who informed the platform draftsmen that it is "absolutely impossible for members of Congress from other States to serve the District as it should be served."

Speaking for the District's colored citizens, and the National Colored Democratic Association, Emory B. Smith, Washington attorney, also put in a word.

The District delegation, which has attracted both the interest and curiosity of delegates by its colorful Boston Tea Party demonstrations, tonight waited the outcome of resolutions sub-committee deliberations on its bid for a District vote plank.

Framers Shy at Planks.

Tendency of platform framers to shy at the suggestion of any constitutional amendment has dampened the hopes of some District delegates that their plank will be included in the final draft of the platform.

Allen, nevertheless, won the applause of the resolutions committee when he branded denial of a vote to half a million citizens "an utterly distressing thought, and grave injustice to an innocent and deserving people."

"A constitutional amendment must be promptly adopted, empowering Congress to grant to the residents of the District of Columbia voting representation in the Senate and House of Representatives, the vote for President and Vice President and the same right as citizens to sue and be sued in the courts of

Democrats Cheer Institute Figures

Philadelphia, June 24.—Delegates to the Democratic convention loudly applauded tonight when Mrs. John Gallaher, of Leesburg, Va., national vice president of the Young Democrats of America, asserted that the Institute of Public Opinion's poll showed that 65 per cent of American youth reaching their majority in the last four years favor the New Deal.

The result quoted by Mrs. Gallaher was taken from an advance release on a poll summary to be published next Sunday in "America Speaks," which appears exclusively in The Post.

Democrats a Bulldog Breed, Are Immune to Leg Weariness

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 24.—The traditional Democratic theory that Republicans are merely a lot of guys named Gus, as the sports writers say, who can give it out but can't take it, is being proved to the satisfaction of reporters here.

For whereas at Cleveland the painful symptoms of "convention foot" appeared on the day before the meet began, the Democrats here have been going in full blast since Sunday evening without even sitting down.

True to the colorful history of the party's conventions, in which numerous conventions have lasted ten days or more, the Democrats now are showing themselves to be a bulldog breed, able to eat, drink, shout, fight and argue from dawn till dawn, and then begin all over again.

This makes a wonderful although exhausting parade for the reporters, half of whom are already going about in wheel chairs. The rest have at least one leg in a sling from trying to keep up with the Democrats, who never walk when they can surge onward at a half trot. If surging is difficult, due to crowds, they continue to lift their feet up and down anyway just to keep in practice for the next surge.

New Deal Met 'Spirit' of '32 Pledges, Arkansan Replies to Foes.

Breaks in 'Letter' Held Unavoidable

Text of Senator Robinson's Address—Page 4

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 24. — In a speech strangely resembling a party platform, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader in the Senate, told the Democratic National Convention here tonight that the Roosevelt Administration had adhered to the spirit of the 1932 platform, and indicated that it intended to continue upon the path it has been traveling.

Robinson was scheduled to speak as the permanent chairman of the convention, but due to a delay of the committee on credentials and permanent organization in reporting, he could not be elected immediately to the post, and he spoke merely as a delegate from Arkansas. The credentials report delay was due to consideration of a contest in the Minnesota delegation.

Opposition to State and local administration of Federal relief funds. Reduction in relief expenditures as soon as circumstances permit.

Maintenance of the United States currency "as the soundest and best in all the world." Return to the gold standard only when circumstances warrant.

Continuance of the reciprocal tariff law and agreements under the law "to save American trade."

Balancing the budget as promptly as this can be done without permitting the unemployed to suffer.

Recognition of the power of the Supreme Court to nullify New Deal law "until the decisions are reversed."

Maintenance of a Navy up to treaty limits and of a trained and efficient Army.

Delegates Stage Parade.

Robinson was greeted with one of the noisiest demonstrations since the opening of the convention. Led by the Arkansas delegation with huge banners and with its own band, the delegates paraded about the hall.

In the procession were two sons of President Roosevelt, James, a delegate from Massachusetts, and Elliot, who, wearing a ten-gallon hat, carried the Texas banner. The demonstration ended only when Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, temporary chairman, announced that radio time was limited and virtually ordered the delegates to return to their seats.

In discussing the currency question, Robinson charged that Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, had "hedged the issue by declaring that the proposed change (to the gold standard) should be made 'when it can be accomplished without penalizing our Democratic economy and without injury to producers of agricultural products.'"

The Senator drew shouts from the crowd when he interpolated into his prepared speech: "A fitting comment on that is the question of Mr. Borah, 'What in the hell does he mean by that?'"

Robinson opened his talk with the charge that Landon, nominee, "has indicated a disposition to bolt on five or more subjects on which his party has spoken." He brought a laugh from the audience by stating that Republican leaders have at last shown a tender, but delayed, appreciation of the 1932 Democratic platform.

"Met Its Spirit."

Answering frequent charges from the opposition, and even from within the Democratic Party, that President Roosevelt had disregarded his party platform, Robinson told the audience that he had faithfully complied with its spirit.

"If there has been partial departure as to the letter of the planks of that platform relating to economy and balancing the budget," he said, "that failure is attributable to the constantly changing conditions and necessities and to the guerrilla warfare of the Republican army."

The Senate majority leader then launched into a description of what he termed the shortcomings of the Hoover Administration, charging that the former President was powerless in the face of the depression. He then described "prompt and decisive action by Democrats."

At this point he began his statement of policies. Robinson was enunciating his "planks," some of them positive, others evasive, the resolutions committee was laboring at a downtown hotel to bring into being the platform scheduled for presentation to the convention tomorrow night. Many of the delegates were making mental notes to compare the utterances of Robinson with those of the actual platform.

First, he took up the subject of relief. He expressed the often-repeated theory that "it is better to give those who are willing to labor the opportunity to do so than to make them dependent on charity or on a government dole." He insisted a greater part of the relief fund is being advantageously used, and attacked the Republican proposal that Federal relief funds be administered by State and local officials.

Admits Abuses.

Robinson admitted there had been some politics in relief and some waste and abuses, but he said the Administration program is freer from these things than any plan ever before devised. He said the drain on the National Treasury has been great and that is must be reduced as rapidly as circumstances permit, but that it cannot be abandoned so long as there is a large group of men and women without employment.

Passing to the money subject, Robinson declared, as the crowd cheered, that the Administration had not created an unsound currency. He said reduction of the gold content of the dollar was necessary so that America might have its share of foreign trade in competition with nations with "managed currency."

Maintenance of the gold standard, he insisted, would eventually have led to disastrous inflation.

The Republican platform, Robinson told the convention, declares for sound money in the language of the Democratic platform of 1932. He charged that Landon, in his telegram to the Cleveland convention, had "hedged" the money issue, but that he had not dared to declare for an immediate return to the gold standard.

The permanent chairman then proceeded to list the five issues on which he said the platform committee had rejected the views of Landon. He used as his authority a newspaper article written by William Allen White, Kansas journalist.

Lists Requests.

The five requests of Landon which Robinson said were rejected are:

1. That all postoffice employes, including the Postmaster General, be put under civil service.
2. An amendment to the Constitution to remedy labor decisions of the Supreme Court.
3. Return to the gold standard.
4. Lower tariffs "under the protective theory."
5. That the platform "go easy" on rejection of the World Court.

Robinson's discussion of the Supreme Court was the longest section of his speech, but he appeared to reach no very definite conclusions. He said the court, by its New Deal decisions, had retarded recovery, but that "we abide by them" until they are reversed.

He hinted an amendment to the Constitution covering labor legislation might be desirable, not by advocating such an amendment in his speech, but by ridiculing the Republican platform which he said "binds its candidate not to seek an amendment."

He added the bar of the United States overwhelmingly repudiates the court's decisions holding that hours and wages cannot be regulated by law.

Cites Hoover Step.

The Arkansas Senator charged the Republicans with being indefinite on the subject of national defense and claimed that the Roosevelt Administration is maintaining a navy up to treaty limits and a well trained and efficient army. On the subject of war debts he asked that the country not forget it was Herbert Hoover who granted a moratorium. The Republican plank on monopoly, he said, was a sop to Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho.

"Our platform," he said, "is to be read in the record of the best national law enforcement ever recorded in the history of our Nation."

Answering charges that President Roosevelt has assumed dictatorial powers, Robinson said:

"If he has been given extraordinary authority by law, it is because the Congress trusted him and regarded him as the best agent it could find."

The convention, scheduled to meet at 8 p. m., was not called to order by Barkley until after 9 o'clock. Then it spent nearly an hour listening to singers and to other speakers until it was time for Robinson to go on the air at 10 p. m.

Senator George, of Georgia, presented a resolution in memory of the late John S. Cohen, of that State, former Senator and former national committeeman. The resolution was seconded by Senator McAdoo, of California, a native of Georgia, and adopted by a rising vote.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—President Roosevelt's spokesmen here are divided over the question of whether the Democratic platform, now being planed into shape, should promise a constitutional amendment that would permit governmental supervision of working hours, wages and working conditions.

WALTMAN.

Indeed, the Presidential advisers are caught on the horns of a dilemma—and they have been pushed there by the action of Gov. Alf. M. Landon in promising support of a constitutional amendment to empower the States to deal with these economic conditions in so far as they affect women and children. The strategy of the Republican nominee's advisers thus is working out as they expected.

One horn of the dilemma which confronts the Democrats is that if they remain silent on the question of a constitutional amendment they will be charged with lacking the courage of their convictions and of betraying their labor supporters, for Permanent Chairman Joe T. Robinson tonight conceded that none of the New Deal labor proposals can be carried out in the face of decisions of the Supreme Court.

The other horn of the dilemma grows out of the fact that President Roosevelt and the New Deal are committed to Federal control of such problems. They cannot espouse a constitutional amendment which only strenghtens the power of the States to deal with these questions. To do so would be an open confession that they have been wrong throughout the last three years.

But in advocating an amendment which would expand the power of the Federal Government over hours, wages and working conditions, the Democrats would be treading politically dangerous paths and even inviting open revolt from within their ranks at this convention. Moreover, there remains the difficulty of drafting such an amendment.

This difficulty was unintentionally illustrated last night in the keynote address of Senator Alben W. Barkley. What we need, said Senator Barkley, "is a new definition and interpretation of interstate commerce," and he proceeded forthwith to give his idea of how that very important phrase should be defined, using these words:

"Every article that is grown or mined or fabricated in one State and destined for another by whatever means of transportation is an object of interstate commerce. It is in competition with every other similar article originating in or destined for other States."

Adoption of such a definition of "interstate commerce" would mean the end of all State sovereignty and would place under Federal jurisdiction the control of every phase of economic activity—except purely local services—as completely as the NRA authorities undertook to do.

Adoption of such a definition of interstate commerce would make a mockery out of every Democratic pretension in behalf of State rights and local self-government. It would subject the southern Maryland farmer, who ships the vegetables he grows on his ten-acre farm into Washington, to the dictates of Congress and a Federal bureaucracy—it would make the smallest manufacturer subject to the whims of Washington. And there is a revulsion to that sort of thing in this country, as was demonstrated by the popular hostility to the NRA long before it was invalidated.

Senator Barkley's effort to define the boundaries of what should be, in his opinion, Federal jurisdiction, along with his sallies against the Supreme Court awakened some of those in the convention to the full implications of the steps proposed to be taken here.

Southerners who yesterday were indifferent to the course of the platform today showed more interest and protested—not loudly, but nevertheless protested—against the plans of those who would wipe out State sovereignty by such methods.

Despite the general reluctance of any individual or group here to buck anything that President Roosevelt wants, there may yet be a sharp fight on the convention floor if the President's spokesmen insist openly on committing the party to the espousal of such doctrines as those projected by Senator Barkley.

On the other hand, a solution may be found by resorting to vague, general language which would assert that the State governments should have all the power necessary to deal with problems properly under their jurisdiction, while the Federal Government should have the authority to deal with broad national problems outside of States.

If the language were sufficiently vague, such a plank might not occasion debate on the convention floor, although a realistic delegate might well ask where the line of demarcation between Federal and State power could be drawn under such an arrangement. That would be a difficult question to answer.

Thus the Republicans, to date, from a purely political viewpoint of influencing voting and as a matter of strategy, seem to have the best of this argument.

Incidentally, Senator Barkley, perhaps without design, last night perpetrated a deception on the American press. Hours in advance of his address, the Democratic National Committee gave out what purported to be copies of the text of his speech. It was filled with searing sallies against critics Republicans, quotations proving the righteousness of the Democratic cause and tables of figures demonstrating economic recovery under the New Deal.

Had Senator Barkley issued a statement in Washington containing the same matter, not a newspaper would have used it in full. They would have summarized it in a column or two. But because it was the Democratic keynote address, most newspapers used every line of it, even though it filled more than 11 columns.

Then Senator Barkley failed to deliver more than one-third of his prepared address because it was too long, a fact which was apparent when the advance copies were given out.

Permanent Chairman Joe Robinson made an amazing statement to the convention tonight. He asserted that "decisions of the Supreme Court in various cases had the effect of slowing up national recovery because they had held invalid the national recovery act, the agricultural adjustment act, the Guffey coal law and some other laws."

A glance at the indices of economic condition will show that the first sustained, full-blossomed economic recovery since the depression started commenced immediately after the NRA was invalidated.

A Republican journalist from Kansas believes that the Democratic Convention accurately symbolizes the New Deal—a little bread and a lot of circus, was the way he put it. And we have had a lot of circus, even before District Commissioner George Allen brought on his Indians.

Baruch Sails; Silent On Political Issues

New York, June 24 (AP).—Holding to his policy of refusing to discuss political issues, Bernard M. Baruch sailed today on the liner Queen Mary for his annual vacation in Europe.

The tall, white-haired financier said there was "absolutely no political significance" in his trip—which comes at a time when the Democratic convention is meeting to renominate President Roosevelt.

of Illinois, who presided at hearings in Wagner's absence; Walter Walker, of Colorado; Wayne Coy, of Indiana; J. Stitt Wilson, of California, and Frank Murphy, Philippine commissioner.

Green Makes Demands.

At yesterday's hearings, prelude to actual platform drafting, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, laid down the same demands he carried to Cleveland, and probably with almost as little success. Except for his plea for collective bargaining recognition, and possibly civil service extension, most of his major proposals will go unheeded. These include, among other things, a two-thirds vote of the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional and a bid for revoking recognition of Soviet Russia.

Reports that the Administration proposes a monetary plank continuing the President's broad powers over money, avoiding a return to gold convertibility, indorsing silver purchase and gold devaluation policies, and possibly further resort to inflationary mediums, drew an immediate response from the economists' national committee on monetary policy.

This group of monetary authorities wired emphatic disapproval of such policies. As evidence of good faith and sound money purposes, the economists' commitee asked that the money, banking and fiscal planks include the following:

"1. Provision for a balanced budget largely by cutting expenditures.

"2. Pledge to insure freedom of Federal Reserve system from political domination.

"3. Provision for return to a gold standard at the present weight of the gold dollar, unless international co-operation for restoring and improving the gold standard suggest the desirability of some slight change in the weight of our gold unit.

"4. Repeal law giving President power to devaluate our currency and return power to Congress.

"5. Repeal of Thomas amendment and silver purchase act.

"6. Recommend appointment of a bipartisan commission, adequately assisted by experts, to make a thorough study of existing money and banking systems."

Pension Request.

A Townsend old age pension plank was laid before the committee by Fletcher B. Green, of California, calling for passage of the McGroarty pension bill. Green took the stand after Chairman C. Jasper Bell, of the special House committee investigating old age pension plans and organizations, had charged that "certain groups of selfish and scheming racketeers and promoters built great organizations and collected vast sums of money, but made no further effort to further the cause of sound old age pensions."

"I appear merely to urge that this committee recommend to the convention a plank in the platform pledging the party to a further study of the old-age pension problem," Bell told the committee.

Recommendations for the party's farm plank, which in its tentative form has attracted the criticism of Midwestern delegates, were presented to the committee by Edward A. O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and L. J. Tabor, of the National Grange.

Economy planks were presented by Robert A. Hall and W. Richardson Blair, speaking for the National Economy League and the junior committee of the league. Condemning the increase in the national deficits through government spending, their proposed plank called for rigid conomy in all branches of the Government, and, if deficits continue, imposition of additional taxes sufficient to balance the budget.

Peace planks were submitted from the National Peace Conference by Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk, director, while Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, offered a Democratic women's platform suggestion leading off with proposals for international peace.

Urge Repeal of Law.

Both Mrs. O'Day and Miss Lena Phillips, the latter speaking for the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, asked for repeal of laws discriminating against women. The National Woman's Party was represented by Mrs. Helen Hunt Jackson, who sought an equal rights amendment to the Constitution, and protested proposals for an amendment extending wages and hours protetction to women, unless men also are included.

Among the members of Congress who took the stand were Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, who asked more stringent immigration laws, and Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, who appealed for more liberal veterans' legislation.

Democratic conventions, but the delegates don't seem to mind.

7:00 a. m.—Wakes up singing, despite having turned in at 4 a. m. Puts on hat, lights cigar and goes to bathroom in flannel nightshirt to shave.

7:30 a. m.—Dresses in yellow tropical-weight suit, putting on the numerous badges and arm bands collected the day before.

7:45 a. m.—Meets pal in elevator, shouts "yah, Joe," awakening everybody three floors up and down. Bellows "how's tricks?" and offers Joe an El Ropo cigar.

8:00 a. m.—Orders light breakfast of orange juice, oatmeal mush, a slab of ham, three eggs "over easy," a stack of toast, jam, and a pot of coffee. Shouts "yay, Harry," "yay, Bill," etc., across dining room to other pals. Calls waitress "girlie," winks broadly at her and tips her 50 cents.

8:30 a. m.—Assembles in lobby with pals, buys a dozen El Fumo cigars, and begins exchanging gossip. Says "What's new, whaddaya know?" to each new arrival in group.

9:00 a. m.—Is drawn aside by Joe, who offers him an El Cabbageo and tells him hot tip, "strictly confidential," that Al Smith is actually here as a Republican spy.

9:01 a. m.—Tells group hot tip. Group adjourns to bar and orders 11 old-fashioneds.

10:30 a. m.—With Joe and manager group sings two arrangements of "Blood on the Saddle."

11 a. m.—Argument develops over whether to take cabs, thus separating party, or to commandeer bus. Joe insists on bus. Our delegate insists on cab. Glares at Joe, hints Joe is not really a Democrat at heart, and tells Joe formally, "just never speak to me again if you see me, on account I don't want anybody to think I know you."

11:30 a. m.—Buys Joe lunch. Gets in cab with Joe and tells cab driver, "Take us to the good old convention hall."

11:45 a. m.—Arrives at hall, takes seat with delegation, yelling "Yay, Texas," or whatever State he is from.

12 noon.—Tells hot tips to chairman of delegation. Chairman excuses himself and hurries to platform. Tells hot tips to national committeeman. National committeeman tells hot tips to Gen. Farley.

Noon to 1 p. m.—Delegate falls asleep in chair. Wakes when Senator Barkley, temporary chairman, gavels for order. Listens to various officials read lists of delegates, committees, etc. Falls asleep again.

2:30 p. m.—Is awakened by reporter asking for news. Tells reporter hot tips. Reporter takes notes carefully, walks up another aisle, carefully tears up notes and wonders why he ever got into this business.

3 p. m.—Awakes again to find Eddie Dowling, master of ceremonies, presenting chorus of 40 voices in various songs.

4 p. m.—11:30 p. m.—Repeat morning routine, substituting different songs and other hot tips.

Midnight—4 a. m.—Repeat morning routine, substituting night club for bar. Takes off hat at 4 a. m. puts down cigar, and goes to sleep.

the United States as is possessed by the citizens of the States," the Commissioner told the committee.

"There is not a grain of justice in a law that repudiates the political ideals upon whose solid rock this great country was founded."

Allen denied that his was an "abject plea," reminding the committee that "the past is strewn with abject appeals."

"The people of the District are fitted for the vote," he said, and are ready to "demand" it. "Taxation without representation was tyranny in 1776," he said. "It still is."

Cites Tax Payments.

Allen pointed out that District residents paid more than $12,000,000 in taxes into the Treasury last year, more than was paid by each of 23 States, and more than 9 States combined. Its population increased 23 per cent from 1930 until last year, while the population of the United States increased only 4 per cent, he said. He pointed out that public school attendance in the District stands at 98 per cent, as against 95 per cent for the country; that its increase in savings deposits outdistanced 21 States; and that District residents buy more newspapers than 28 of the States, and more periodicals than 42.

Continuing his recital of facts and figures, which he said showed Washington is exceptionally qualified to vote, Allen cited the low, 1 per cent level of District illiteracy. He said the total wealth of the District approximates $1,860,000,000, greater than the wealth of eight States combined. "We do not even ask our full right," he said. "District of Columbians are content with their tri-cornered type of city government, three presidentially appointed men under whom come all District agencies. But we do want, and know we are fitted for, a voice in the national affairs in our country."

Mrs. Norton, following Commissioner Allen before the committee, asked that the District "be taken out of its present classification with imbeciles, convicts and incompetents, and be given the same rights and privileges as other intelligent citizens."

She pointed out that present members of Congress, charged with the task of legislating for the District, have their own constituents in the States to look out for, and the latter task is their first consideration.

Press Big Guns Spiked by Trite Parley Stories

Philadelphia, June 24.—They have turned out the great, smoky-blue Klieg lights. The vast, empty convention hall is dim and desolate with the litter of a session's aftermath. Now the reporters are grinding the two halves of their brains together in the search for deathless sentences and imperishable words with which to fix the spectacle on paper.

Throughout the press section you can hear the groans of men and women trying to find a new way to tell a story with which every citizen in the country is familiar.

For this convention has only one story, really, and no matter how they deck it with flags, trick it out in gags and point it up with noise, it's still an old story to the country, the week-long progress of the Democrats toward renomination of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner.

Tonight, fresh from a day of practicing new yells, of painting new banners, of devising new costumes and of generally thinking up new devilments for the Republicans, the Democrats assembled very slowly, whacked the foe by speech and by act for two and one-half hours, and left five minutes after the main speech was over.

The hall fills very gradually. A session called for 8 p. m. is gaveled to order at 9:40 p. m. Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the temporary chairman, mutters to Gen. Farley:

"May as well start. There's as many here as are going to come." The hall is nearly filled. Routine reports are read. The band, which has played intermittently, is finally silent. The pipe organ, which has likewise taken its turn, is quieted. Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, takes the stand to assail the enemy. They start cheering for him. A demonstration lasting over 20 minutes automatically begins, whipped on by three bands, the organ, countless mechanical noise-makers, and the screams of the two champion screamers here, the Misses Kitty and Dorothy Keelan, of New York, stenographers on vacation.

Photographers Work.

This goes on for some time, while the photographers work really hard for new and novel shots.

Then Senator Robinson begins to speak in his high, powerful, clear voice, the strongest voice of any man yet to speak at this or the Cleveland convention, as it often registers as high as 60 and 70 on the applause-gauge of Columbia Broadcasting System. This is remarkable, when you consider that the average strong politician's voice seldom goes more than 20 decibels of sound. But his voice, though clear and strong, is monotonous, almost droning, almost without emphasis or let-down.

As a whole the convention does not listen, missing obvious points of applause frequently. Up and down the aisles the delegates walk, gossiping noisily and making plans for the later evening. Women sit knitting and chatting. The galleries empty gradually.

Senator Robinson finishes. There is a brief demonstration and the delegates and the galleries rush for the buses outside in the rain.

So it has gone throughout this meeting here. The big guns of journalism, in their frantic search for copy, have had to sink to the figurative level of popguns, as many of them are writing what country newspapers call "poison-als," little news-nuggets about people who show up in the city and in the hall.

Connolly, Townsend.

Tonight the word went around the press section that One-Eyed Connolly and Dr. Francis Townsend, chief of the old age revolving pensions, were holding a joint press conference. We rushed to the scene. They were both there, but holding separate conferences.

The highlight of the evening, as far as the press section was concerned, was an excessively lovely young lady named Mrs. Robin Hitt, of New York City, who so overwhelmed the members of the District of Columbia delegation here that they insisted on her taking a seat with them, despite the fact she is not a delegate at all.

As this seat was in the front row of the hall, second from the aisle, the photographers took her picture no less than 32 times. She wore a large natural straw hat with a fluted brim, a simple navy blue dress, and high-heeled blue kid pumps.

Reporters, taking her for a new and overpowering addition to the District delegation, kept interviewing her all evening on one pretext or another, even asking her opinion of foreign affairs.

The gigantic Mummers parade and Mardi Gras, originally planned for tonight, were called off finally after a day-long drizzle, and will be held tomorrow night, culminating in the choice of the convention's queen and ladies-in-waiting.

Chance to Serve On Committee Given Women

Women do not deceive themselves as to the value of their strategy, for they realize that the actual membership of the resolutions committee will remain almost unanimously male, but they feel that as alternates, they will have the right to attend the meetings of the committee and possibly take part in the discussion even though they will not have votes.

Miss Dewson stated her belief that this is the greatest step taken to give women a voice in formulating the platform of any party. Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Congresswoman at Large from New York, also was elated at what she considered a step forward in the women's battle for party recognition.

Since it is not practical to enlarge the already cumbersome resolutions committee, she remarked, "this is the most practical way at present to get a hearing for the woman's point of view. Even if we are merely alternates, the actual committee members will have to take cognizance of our wishes, and there will always be the chance that some woman will have to take the place of a delegate in case of illness or other reasons for absence."

Mrs. Bass Laughs.

From the psychological point of view the value of the idea cannot be denied, for the immediate effect upon every woman in the large women's headquarters was electrifying. Their faces were lighted with triumphant smiles and the skepticism of a few press representatives as to the actual results which could be achieved by this novel departure from convention organization made no impression on their moods. To be sure, Mrs. George Bass, unquestionably the most experienced woman politician in the Democratic Party, when shown the resolution, laughed loud and long and said "the well-known adherence to sex equality in the Democratic Party could go no further."

"But considering that most of the men on the platform committee have really very little influence on the actual planks and party pronouncements," continued Mrs. Bass in the same skeptical vein, "it can, of course, be considersd an advance for women in the party deliberations. As a matter of fact, this resolution will have a tendency to force the men to give the women an increased representation on the actual membership of the resolutions committee."

Mrs. Glenn Plumb, alternate at large from Illinois, was another enthusiast.

"This step," she explained, "is a distinct gain in that it shows that men are beginning to realize that the power of women politically has not yet been tapped."

In any case, the women now have one foot on the Democratic platform committee and they seem to trust themselves enough to feel that the other will soon follow.

They are justified in this self-assurance if one considers that there are almost four times as many women delegates in this Democratic Convention as in the Republican Convention, recently held at Cleveland. Moreover, the whole management of the women's headquarters is business-like and efficient, especially as to its relationship with the press. In the large drawing room reserved for the women delegates and their friends a radio carries the convention proceedings to all those who are not fortunate enough to possess tickets for the auditorium. There is no question that the Democratic women have thought out their approach to political problems more carefully and thoroughly than their sister Republicans have and therefore have been more successful in obtaining recognition from the party leaders.

The platform will tell the story of their achievements, and when it is made public I hope to evaluate the aims of the women in both political camps by comparing the planks especially devoted to women's interests in the Democratic platform with those which the Republican women achieved at Cleveland.

long-distance phone to the White House. They refer merely to the granting of licenses to sell silk stockings, fountain pens, pop, postcards, chewing gum, horns, noise-makers and "roses-of-felt for Roosevelt" in the ante-rooms of the auditorium.

The resolutions committee evidently takes public testimony on the excellent principle of having all suggestions neatly cancel out. Thus today former Congressman Upshaw demanded a plank denouncing the twin perils of communism and liquor, to be almost immediately followed on the stand by Heyward Broun, alleged not to be particularly hostile to either menace. Mr. Broun urged a constitutional amendment. I have lost my notes on his remarks but it will not be far wrong to suggest that their motif was protection of the rights of labor.

After Mr. Broun came a spokesman for the Sentinels of the Republic, who view the rights of labor with a fishy eye but are greatly concerned for a return to the gold standard. And this brought us squarely back to the opening of the hearings, at which spokesmen of farm organizations had made impassioned pleas for rubber dollars.

Somewhere in between, Albert S. Falk, of Wheaton, Minn., advocated a plank giving pensions to "everybody" while Dr. Ernest Minor Patterson, representing the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy, demanded "provision for a balanced budget largely by cutting expenditures." Also paired were Dr. Walter Van Kirk, director of the National Peace Conference, demanding co-operation with the League of Nations, and Representative Jed Johnson, Oklahoma at a guess, demanding repudiation of the League of Nations.

Gracefully Thanked.

All of these advocates and many others here unmentioned were gracefully and undiscriminatingly thanked by Senator Wagner or one of his platform committee aids. Their testimonies were then made part of the official record and the witnesses trooped back to Philadelphia. Here was disillusionment. The Mardi Gras and Mummers' parade scheduled tonight had been called off and the only remaining attraction on a wet night was to go out to Convention Hall again and listen dutifully to Joe Robinson.

All in all the inquiring reporter at Philadelphia is not to be blamed if he feels at something of a loss. It is quite apparent that the leadership of the Democratic Party is taking that historic organization through revolutionary changes. It is equally apparent that the rank and file of the delegates know very little and perhaps care less about what is going on.

It is obvious that the iron men of the party are working day and night, holding conferences on strategy, valiantly trying to draft a compromise platform which shall be less inconsistent than that of the Republican Party, even endeavoring to build a political philosophy which can serve as an after-the-event justification for the spending program.

Not Interested at All.

But it is equally obvious that the mass of the delegates are not the slightest bit interested in where their party is going so long as the road runs back through the White House next November. That seems to be the symbolic meaning of the synthetic cheers elicited whenever the magic name of Roosevelt is mentioned.

And of course never before, or at least not since the days of Commodus, was a revolution disposed of under the generalship of so grand a showman as James Farley. The Klieg lights, the bands, the bevies of lady delegates, the police sirens, and indeed the whole tempo of the show seems to glow more brightly under his dulcet ministration. He should easily be able to spin it out until Saturday, if only the rains hold off.

And while Mr. Farley is not exactly a classical scholar he certainly knows the value of the "bread and circuses" formula as well as any Roman Emperor.

Clash at Rally On Two-Thirds Rule Due Today

opponents of the change, it will be a losing fight. President Roosevelt has declared in favor of abolishing the rule.

Premium on Disloyalty.

Strong told the committee that the change would punish the States that have been responsible for electing Democratic Presidents.

"It would place a premium on disloyalty instead of loyalty," he said.

He pointed out that there was no need of a change of rules in the present convention because there are no contests for the nominations and that the 1940 convention will make its ow rules. Those in favor of abolishing the two-thirds rule are seizing this opportunity for the very reason that there are no contests. Rumors that the rule change is designed to pave the way for a third term of President Roosevelt have been called asinine by Farley.

Strong complained to the committee that it was proposing to "punish the South because it votes Democratic." He added that because the South is Democratic, the party's candidates have been nominated from more doubtful Northern States. He declared that with the two-thirds rule abolished, New York, Pennsylvania and other large Eastern States would dictate party nominees. If the rule is abolished, he added, the least that could be done would be to give the Democratic States larger convention representation in proportion to population than Republican States.

Others Argue.

Miss Hortense K. Wells, a delegate from Florida, expressed agreement with Strong's argument. Arguments for abolishing the rule were made by Representative Doughton, of North Carolina; L. R. Fox, of Wisconsin, and others. Fox presented the original motion to change the rule. A half-dozen Southern States are expected to oppose the change, and they will be joined by Massachusetts, whose delegation apparently wants to keep the rule.

Fox told the committee he had hoped for harmony in the convention, but that raising of the rule question had injected an element of disturbance.

"The change," he said, "is unnecessary, unjust and foolish. It would be a terrible blunder from which the party would not recover for generations. We need protection against a blind and ruthless majority."

Sees Shift in Control.

He added that a mere majority rule would remove control of the party from the country's center of area to the center of population. He said the proposed change was a step in the general movement against a section of the country that is Democratic, but which never had a President.

Repeatedly during the argument, delegates referred to the 1912 convention, where the two-thirds rule resulted in the nomination of Woodrow Wilson rather than Champ Clark. Much of the argument was an implied reflection upon Wilson. Presiding at the hearings was Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, son of Champ Clark. Senator Clark has been bitter in his discussion of the 1912 convention and has made the statement that if his father had been nominated the United States would not have entered the war.

Fox charged that the next move would be to strip the Southern States of the right of self-government.

'Madhouse,' Townsend Says of Convention

"It's a madhouse," he said.

Maryland Bloc Favors Change In Rule on Vote

State's 16 Votes to Be Cast for Proposal to Void Two Thirds Plan.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Senator Millard E. Tydings, chairman of the Maryland delegation to the Democratic Convention, announced tonight that a poll of part of the State's delegation revealed "overwhelming sentiment" for abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

Thus Maryland's 16 votes will be cast in favor of repealing the two-thirds rule when that issue comes before the convention tomorrow.

The Marylanders selected Miss E. W. Risteau, of Harford County, as their alternative member of the resolutions committee under a resolution adopted earlier in the day providing women alternates from each delegation on the platform group.

Otherwise the Maryland delegation had an eventless day, devoted chiefly to attending the two convention sessions.

Senator Tydings said he had not been able to find an authentic copy of the tentative platform draft. The Maryland delegation is interested in preventing if it can, any plank which would put the party on record as encroaching on States rights.

He said he had heard that proposals for a constitutional amendment providing increased Federal power would be rejected. He stated he would continue to watch this phase of the platform situation.

Virginia Opposed.

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP).—Platform committee "grapevine" engaged the attention today of Virginia delegates to the Democratic convention while their rules committee representative awaited his turn to attack a proposal to abolish the two-thirds rule.

The Virginians listened attentatively in hotel lobbies to reports on what the platform writers were doing and were known to be in close contact with Senator Carter Glass, who is in Washington, on planks affecting the currency and Constitution.

At the rules committee meeting, State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, Virginia's member, was ready to lambast the proposal to abrogate the two-thirds rule, but the committee adjourned before he was reached. The session resumes tomorrow.

The Virginians participated in force in Convention Hall activities, joining in demonstrations for President Roosevelt and sending a roar of cheers across the hall when Senator Harry F. Byrd was announced to succeed himself as National Committeeman.

Delegation Chairman J. Murray Hooker had his first experience with the convention microphones when he shouted to the platform the names of the Virginia convention officers. Besides the committee assignments announced previously, Hooker reported the appointment of Mrs. John Garland Pollard, wife of the former Governor, as alternate to Gov. George C. Peery on the resolutions committee, and selection of State Senator A. E. Shumate, Giles, for the committee to notify the President; Mrs. Louise Galleher, Leesburg, for the committee to notify the Vice President; Clyde W. Saunders, Richmond, honorary vice president; Mrs. Cleveland Davis, Lexington, honorary assistant vice president; W. W. Beverly, Richmond, honorary secretary; Mrs. Geline Bowman, Richmond, honorary assistant secretary; Senator Byrd, national committeeman, and Mrs. R. C. Watts, Lynchburg, national committeewoman.

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 24 (AP).—Mrs. James Roosevelt, 81-year-old mother of the President, is staying close to the radio in the library of her Hyde Park home this week, following the proceedings of the Democratic National Convention.

She will go to Philadelphia by automobile Saturday to attend the closing sessions, and will be present at the notification ceremony.

Democrats Set for Battle on Record of Pledges Kept, Deeds Performed—Robinson

Senator Calls Landon Threat To Bolt Platform Bad Faith

Convention Chairman, in Detailed Recounting of Record of Hoover, Lauds Democratic Program as Holding High Hope for Nation.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 24.—The text of the address to the Democratic National Convention by Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the permanent chairman, follows:

National campaigns heretofore usually have involved sharply defined issues on which political discussions have centered. The principal concern of the recent Republican convention at Cleveland was to reconcile its candidate for the Presidency with the declarations embraced in its platform. It was not the first time in our history that a nominee, in advance of accepting the nomination, has placed his interpretation on the language employed, but it is the first instance in which a candidate, by keeping silent on national public questions and after maneuvering himself into a position assuring his selection, has indicated a disposition to bolt on five or more subjects on which his party had spoken. It is also the first case in which the platform committee and convention have anticipated the purpose of a prospective nominee to break away in a direction opposite to their movement by declaring that it would constitute a breach of public faith and of private honor should he fail or refuse to conform to the policies laid down for his guidance.

Republican leaders lately have shown tender, if too long delayed, appreciation for the platform on which the Democrats won the election of 1932.

Their speakers enter this campaign declaring that we have betrayed the country by failing to carry out the promises which at first they regarded as repugnant but which are now dear to the hearts of our opponents.

The Roosevelt administration has faithfully complied with the spirit of the Chicago platform promises. If there has been partial departure as to the letter of the planks in that platform relating to economy and balancing the budget that failure is attributable to the constantly changing conditions and necessities, and to the guerrilla warfare of the Republican Army.

Policies of Republican Administration Reviewed.

Because of the policies of three Republican administrations extending over a period of 12 years, a condition existed March 4, 1933, which cannot be adequately described. Breakdown was threatened in the government of many States as well as in that of the Nation. Millions of laborers were out of work. The spectre of poverty cast its appalling shadow over the land. Credit sources were dried up, financial institutions were bankrupt; factories were closed down; agriculture was profitless; the savings of cities were being swept away; business was at a standstill; our foreign commerce had almost disappeared, and hoarding was general.

These conditions had resulted in large part from governmental policies, economic isolation, riotous speculation, promotion of monopolies and the contraction of credits for the private profits of market manipulators.

You have not forgotten—can you ever forget the gloom, the sorrow and the distress which clouded the hopes and hampered the activities of all of our people?

President Hoover seemed powerless to suggest any method by which the engulfing tides of adversity might be impeded or turned back. All he could do, apparently, was to boast a refracted vision which he claimed enabled him to see prosperity around corners. Having employed the army to drive from the Capital thousands of hungry war veterans, he retired to the cloister of the White House and indulged in crystal gazing to predict the quick return of better times which never began until after he had been retired to the sun-baked gardens of Palo Alto to give place to the new leader of the Nation, President Roosevelt.

The Democratic leadership recognized that drastic changes in governmental policies were necessary to bring back courage and confidence and to restore financial stability.

Feeble and ordinary processes had been tried and had failed. New and decisive methods and measures were demanded and required. They were necessarily formulatd with haste. It is not surprising that difficulties were encountered or that mistakes were made. To have awaited then the slow working out and execution of plans for recovery would have been fatal. No one is wise enough, even with post-vision, to know what would have happened if extraordinary legislation had not been speedily enacted and put into effect.

Banking Law Revision and Insurance Recalled.

The banking laws were revised; insurance for bank deposits was provided; runs on banks were stopped, and the national credit was employed to prevent bankruptcy and ruin of banking institutions, of railways and of key industries.

For 12 years before March 4, 1933, Republican administrations had grappled with the farm problem. The only important measure they enacted, the "Farm Marketing Act," had cost the Federal Treasury $500,000,000 and had left agriculture in a worse condition.

The Democratic Administration created a system for co-ordinating production with consumption, and for the payment of benefits to farmers, which quickly restored agricultural prices to an approximate level with the prices of industrial products. Indebtedness, under which farm homes were being foreclosed, was refinanced at reduced interest rates. Foreclosures were suspended. Quickly there appeared better conditions with respect to both agriculture and industry.

With the depreciation of values and the unparalleled fall in prices following the collapse of markets in 1929, small businesses were merged into gigantic combinations with monopolistic tendencies, or were forced into bankruptcy. As trade and purchasing power diminished, unemployment increased, savings were exhausted and millions of formerly self-supporting citizens were compelled to accept charity.

When the Roosevelt Administration began, local agencies, the States, cities and counties, had well nigh exhausted their resources, and charitable organizations were unable to meet the constantly growing demands upon them.

Hundreds of thousands of young men, many of them college or high school graduates, were entering life without prospect. The professions were overcrowded, and the immediate future held little promise for the youth of America.

Benefits Under FERA, CCC and CWA Cited.

There was devised the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the Civil Conservation Corps organization and the Civil Works Administration. When the conservation corps was first established it was ridiculed as a useless and costly experiment. In spite of the contempt of those who had stood motionless and dumb while the catastrophe was approaching, the organization has demonstrated its effectiveness for keeping deserving young men from becoming hoboes, and for giving them useful service in the construction of highways, the improvement of public parks, buildings and grounds, the reforestation of denuded areas and in other helpful spheres of labor. Now the value of the emergency conservation corps is generally, almost unanimously, recognized. Former President Hoover vainly boasts that he was its originator.

The Civil Works Administration required comprehensive planning. It was difficult to find useful employment in the neighborhoods where the unemployed were located. The concensus of opinion is that more than 75 per cent of the funds expended through that agency was of substantial and permanent advantage to the communities in which the work was carried on.

When the Civil Works Administration had served its purpose it was found that the ranks of the unemployed were constantly being augmented by those who, in the beginning of the depression, had been able to live upon their savings, but who as time progressed were compelled to spend their savings.

While many key industries had been restored following recovery measures to an approximately normal state, private agencies continued to pursue economical methods and to substitute machinery for hand labor, with the result that a compresensive program of public works became necessary and was authorized under act of 1935, contemplating a Nationwide system of public works, some of them consisting of permanent structures. In order to take from the dole 3,500,000 laborers, the Works Progress Administration was organized and plans were made for public works in thousands of communities in which the unemployed resided. Manifestly the number on the Federal emergency relief rolls could not be concentrated in the communities where public buildings and similar works could be located; so that it became necessary to plan for the employment of the majority of them in or near the communities where they lived. To accomplish this, undertakings of a less permanent nature than those contemplated by the Public Works Administration program became indispensable. The opposition have described these expenditures as wasteful and foolish.

Theory Underlying WPA Setup Is Analyzed.

The theory of the Works Progress Administration is that it is better to give those who are willing to labor the opportunity to do so than to make them dependent on charity or on Government dole.

There is no more pathetic spectacle than that of an honest man, accustomed to earning a livelihood for himself and his dependents, forced to face starvation or to accept private or public charity. If his self-respect is to be maintained he should be given opportunity to help himself. That is exactly what has been done through the Works Progress program. The greater part of the large fund has been and is being advantageously used. The issue is whether public employment shall be abandoned for the dole. No one dares advocate that those who can not get work shall be permitted to starve.

Certainly where the States and their subdivisions are able to do so they should be expected to contribute a fair share to the very laudable and so far only practicable plan that has been offered for solving the one great problem incident to the depression, namely, unemployment.

The opponents of the present Administration advocate the abdication by the national Government of control over the administration of Federal relief funds. They assert that such funds should be expended solely by local agencies of the States. Their contention is that this will eliminate politics and prevent waste and corruption. Experience has not shown that to be true.

To require the Federal Government to provide the funds and to relinquish all control over their expenditure would be to invite competition among the localities to secure grants from the Government which would result in demands so great that the national credit would be impaired.

With respect to politics, the record shows that there have been less abuses than under any other plan that has been employed. State officers are not exempt from political influence. Indeed, local pressure on State and county officers might prove irresistible and overpowering.

There is no plan conceivable under which no waste will occur and under which all abuses may be prevented. So long as the national Government provides the major portion of the sums necessary for the unemployed, it must, for its own protection, and for the protection of those who are required to pay the bill, retain a liberal measure of supervision both as the purpose and the manner of the expenditures.

U. S. Currency Held Soundest in World.

The drain on the national treasury by reason of extraordinary measures, particularly including those relating to unemployment, has been great. It must be reduced as soon and as rapidly as circumstances permit. Unemployment assistance cannot be abandoned so long as there are large groups of American men and women unable to find an opportunity to earn livelihood.

Much will be heard of sound money during this campaign.

When world economic conditions were approaching their worst, Great Britain and many other powers went off the gold standard and resorted to what is known as "managed currency." The advantage they thus derived in trade and commerce over peoples still dealing under the gold standard became manifest. To prevent our foreign trade from being taken over by competitors, and to avoid further contraction of credit which threatened, we reduced the gold content of the dollar. We did not create an unsound currency.

Indeed, United States currency is the soundest and the best in all the world, and we propose to keep it so. Had we remained on the gold standard while competitor nations were resorting to managed currencies we would have lost, not only our foreign commerce and have witnessed our domestic trade reduced to the vanishing point, but the Government would have been compelled to face a demand for monetary inflation that would have been irresistible. Once the printing presses are started turning out money you can never hope to stop expenditures or to stabilize values until the media has run its course. That has been the experience of every nation known to history.

The Republican platform adopted at Cleveland declares for sound money in the language of the Democratic platform of 1932. The fiercest issue in the committee platform at Cleveland was over return to the gold standard. The committee repudiated the proposition and the convention without controversy supported the committee.

At the beginning of his speech nominating Gov. Landon, Mr. Hamilton, the boss of the Cleveland convention, announced that the candidate had views of his own on the monetary question. In his telegram the candidate declared that he favored return to the gold standard—currency convertible into gold.

It is true that he hedged the issue by declaring that the proposed change should be made "when it can be accomplished without penalizing our democratic economy and without injury to producers of agricultural products."

For that declaration, made immediately before his nomination, the Republican candidate for President has been proclaimed as bold and defiant.

Finds Good Faith of G.O.P. Nominee Questioned.

Almost everyone realizes that there can be no return to the gold standard under present conditions without "penalizing our democratic economy and without injury to producers of agricultural products." Gov. Landon did not dare advocate an immediate return to the gold standard. His effort and that of former President Hoover to have a plank incorporated in the Cleveland platform was a failure. Candidate Landon's declaration on the subject evades the issue by the use of language that clearly shows he does not believe it safe and practicable to reestablish, at this time, a gold standard currency.

The Cleveland convention did an unusual thing. It impliedly questioned the good faith of its prospective nominee and his willingness to stand upon the platform by the last clause in that document, which is as follows:

"The acceptance of the nomination tendered by this convention carries with it as a matter of private honor and public faith an undertaking by every candidate to be true to the principles and program herein set forth."

When that language is considered in connection with the well-known fact that in five important particulars the platform committee rejected the views of Gov. Landon, it is undeniable that the committee was preparing for a candidate whom it knew to be out of sympathy with the platform.

That there are five particulars in which the candidate was turned down by the platform committee, the press reports from the pen of Mr. William Allen White, who constitutes the head of the Landon "brain trust," may be cited.

In a copyrighted article emanating from Cleveland on June 11, 1936, Mr. White published these five points raised by the candidate and rejected by the committee and the convention.

What are the five points?

First—(Quoted from Mr. White's article), "Landon telephoned from Topeka this morning he would like to have a declaration putting all postoffice employes, including the Postmaster General, under civil service." Neither the committee nor the convention would stand for placing Cabinet officers under the civil service.

Second—"He also desired a plank curing the Supreme Court decision denying to States the right to control hours of service, working conditions and wages. Landon advocates an amendment to the Constitution—his plea was denied."

The committee and the convention not only denied his plea but adopted declaration that the integrity and the authority of the Supreme Court have been flaunted, and pledged resistance to all attempts to impair the authority of the Supreme Court. He also advocates the adoption of State laws to abolish sweat-shops and child labor, and to protect women and children with respect to maximum wages, and decent working conditions—which is exactly what the Supreme Court held in Morehead vs. Tipaldo the States cannot do.

Third—The third particular in which Mr. William Allen White declares that Candidate Landon was rebuffed by the committee and the convention is with respect to the gold standard and a currency convertible into gold. Mr. White said: "After considerable protest he ceased firing on the currency."

Fourth—According to Mr. White, the Kansas delegation (for Gov. Landon) offered a plank "looking directly to lower tariffs, but under the protective theory. The plank as it stands represents a compromise."

Fifth—In 1932 the Republicans adopted a declaration favoring the United States joining the World Court and boasted that Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover had urged that course. The Cleveland platform pledges that the United States shall not become a member of the World Court. Candidate Landon opposed the declaration. Again quoting Mr. White: "Gov. Landon over the telephone this morning asked that the abandonment of the World Court be reconsidered, his request was almost unanimously rejected."

Beliefs of Nominee Differ From Platform, He Says.

This bit of convention history discloses that the platform committee in the convention doubted whether the candidate would carry out the platform and that they sought to bind him by the unusual charge made in advance that if he failed to do so his action would constitute a breach of private honor and of faith.

It has been shown that the candidate of the Republican Party proposed a platform declaration in favor of reduced rates, which was rejected.

The Cleveland platform declares for the repeal of the reciprocal tariff law and for an embargo on livestock, dairy and agricultural products.

Under the reciprocal tariff law there have been negotiated various trade agreements which have had the effect of stimulating our foreign commerce without materially interfering with our domestic trade. To repeal this law and impose embargoes will virtually mean the end of our foreign commerce. American ships will rot at their docks and our vessels will disappear from the seas. Under the Republican policy surpluses will continue to pile up in the home market to the ruin of American producers.

The Republican platform declares for the immediate balancing of the budget without additional taxes, by simply reducing expenditures. This suggestion is intended to attract taxpayers. No one close to the leadership of the Republican Party regards the proposition as practical in the immediate future. The Roosevelt Administration has balanced the budget except as to extraordinary expenditures, and the question is whether unemployment relief expenditures shall be discontinued in order to accomplish what we all desire to be done as speedily as possible, namely establish complete balance between revenues and Government expenses.

The last session of the Congress, with the approval of Republican members, authorized approximately $750,000,000 to be expended for flood control, the expenditure to be spread over a period of years.

In addition, there have been a billion and a half dollars appropriated for work relief during the fiscal year 1937. These and other items keep the budget out of balance for the present. To balance the budget promptly would be to terminate at once all relief. Is this desirable? Do the American people wish to deny all assistance from the National Government to workers, who are out of employment and who cannot secure engagements from private industry.

A comparison of the income tax, the excess profits tax, alcoholic liquor and other miscellaneous internal revenue, exclusive of the agricultural adjustment tax, for the first six months of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932 with the same months of the year ending June 30, 1935, shows an increase of almost 100 per cent.

During the six months period July 1 to December 31, 1935, revenue collections were about equal to those for the full fiscal year of 1932. During that year $1,557,000,000 from the sources named were collected. During the fiscal year 1935, $2,730,000,000 came into the Treasury from the same sources.

Balancing of Budget Held Goal of Party.

The Democratic policy contemplates balancing the budget as promptly as this can be done without permitting citizens, who cannot secure private employment, to experience suffering from hunger and cold. This policy we believe to be justified from both an economic and a humane standpoint.

By the quick adoption of machines, employment in America has been maladjusted. Added to this, has been the loss of purchasing power incident to the depression and unemployment arising because of the reduction of business and enterprise. As these are revived and restored, and as hours of labor are shortened, the necessity for work relief appropriations will diminish and disappear.

Decisions of the Supreme Court in various cases have had the effect of slowing up national recovery because they have held invalid the national recovery act, the agricultural adjustment act, the Guffey coal law and some other laws intended to prevent labor controversies, eliminate unfair competition in trade and in industry and to secure fair prices for agricultural products. In spite of these decisions, the American people are going forward. We recognize that the decisions of the Supreme Court until reversed are final and we abide by them. Nevertheless, we do not regard the court above and beyond those factors and causes which naturally influence the minds of human beings.

The decision in the Guffey coal act case held that the Federal Government has no power to prescribe maximum hours and minimum wages for workers in coal mines, because, among other things, it constitutes a transgression of the rights and functions of the States. In the New York maximum hours and minimum wages case recently handed down, the majority held that the States cannot prescribe maximum hours and minimum wages on the theory that to do so violates the right of contract secured to our citizens by the Federal Constitution.

Notwithstanding this situation, the Republican Party advocates legislation by the States, and binds its candidate not to seek an amendment to the Federal Constitution authorizing the Congress or State legislatures to regulate maximum hours and minimum wages for laborers.

Finds Bar of United States Questions High Court Ruling.

Whatever may be the just bases for differences of opinion respecting other decisions, the bar of the United States overwhelmingly repudiates the denial by the Supreme Court of the power to regulate maximum hours and minimum wages. By the decision the right of private contract is not fortified and strengthened. In a practical sense it is weakened and destroyed.

What right of private contract is secured by the majority opinion to the woman who exhausts her physical energies by toiling excessive hours for starvation wages in unsanitary sweatshops to support herself and her dependent children? What power has she, unsupported by law, to protect her rights and to secure fair and adequate compensation for her labor? How does this decision strengthen freedom or glorify justice?

O, blind and impartial justice, what blunders are committed in thy name! Liberty, art thou both deaf and dumb! Canst thou not behold the pallid faces, the emaciated forms, the sweating brows, the trembling hands of millions of women and children workers who, by the decision, are left at the mercy of those who have neither pity nor charity for the oppressed and the poor?

The decision in Morehead vs. Tipaldo should be reversed under that due process of law clause which has been unjustly invoked as its justification.

The decision itself has answered the charge of pompous plutocrats that Roosevelt and his Administration seek to undermine and destroy the Supreme Court. The Republicans, in their platform, attack the decision and halfheartedly advocate the passage of State laws which by the precedent of Morehead vs. Tipaldo would be of doubtful constitutionality.

The weight of the argument in the opinion of lawyers and laymen, it is believed, sustains the minority, rather than the majority opinion.

Certainly when such judges as Chief Justice Hughes, Justices Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo declare a statute consistent with the fundamental law, and criticize the views to the contrary of the judges constituting a majority as unsound and subversive it cannot be disloyal or revolutionary for citizens who believe that the consequences inevitably will be to deprive women and children laborers of valid legal protection to express their opinion on the subject with firmness and emphasis. Everyone, including those sagacious politicians who until recently sought partisan advantage by praising our highest judicial tribunal for upsetting various features of the national recovery program, now seeks concurrence in a plan to overcome a decision which, they say, if permitted to stand will prove oppressive.

The Cleveland platform denounces the Democratic Party for the policies and measures which have been adopted during the Roosevelt Administration for the promotion of national recovery. Many Republican members in both branches of the Congress suggesting no substitute voted for the passage of the legislation because they, as did Democratic members of the Congress, recognize the extreme and unusual conditions which made extraordinary action imperative. This is true of the most important laws held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, including the national recovery act, the agricultural adjustment act and the Guffey coal measure. It would be interesting and perhaps surprising to those who have been impressed with the denunciation of the measures and policies of the Roosevelt Administration by the Republican convention to hear the names of the prominent Republican leaders in the Senate and in the House of Representatives who supported the measures referred to and who now find themselves denounced by their own convention as intimidators, usurpers and advocates of tyrannical policies.

As a sop to the Senator from Idaho, Mr. Borah, the Cleveland Convention declared, in general terms, for the enforcement of criminal laws and for the enactment of additional legislation to prevent private monopoly.

These declarations would be received with more confidence if the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover Administrations had not neglected the enforcement of criminal laws and fostered the organization of trusts and combinations tending to drive all forms of business and industry under the domination of monopoly.

The Democratic Administration seeks to protect small business against those great combinations which crush them and drive them out of existence.

It has terminated the reign of gangsters by destroying the kidnaper, the national bank robber and the outlaw who seeks refuge in flight to other States from the place of his crime.

Our platform is to be read in the record of the best national enforcement ever recorded in the history of our Nation.

It is, of course, impracticable to make reference in this address to all of the features of the Republican platform which invite consideration.

As an illustration, however, of the attempt to attract support by the announcement of principles which are generally accepted, and concerning which there can be no partisan division, your attention is directed to the "Bill of Rights," which pledges preservation, protection and defense against all intimidation and threats, freedom of religion, speech, press and radio. There has been no impairment or threat to impair any of them by the Roosevelt Administration, although the misrepresentation has been made that in some mysterious way they have been disregarded and held in contempt.

Republicans Called Indefinite on Defense.

National defense is a subject of interest to every citizen loyal to our flag and to the institutions which it symbolizes. The Republican platform on this subject is indefinite. It favors an Army and Navy, including Air Corps, adequate for defense. No standard is raised as to what constitutes adequacy. The platform declares for co-operation with other nations in the control of armaments and in the traffic of arms. It is a trite definition without definite meaning. Every Administration since the World War, and some of them before that, has offered co-operation with rival powers for the limitation of military and naval arms.

Just now, when international antagonists are being stimulated, when continents tremble beneath the tread of maddened armies and when age-long hatreds are prompting nations to strife, it is impossible to accomplish substantial reduction in military force without sacrifice of national security. The Roosevelt Administration is building the Navy to full strength contemplated by the Washington and London treaties. It is maintaining a well-trained and efficient Army. Our platform on national defense is written in the record of achievements.

Another feature of the Cleveland platform which discloses how hard its sponsors were driven to find a popular issue relates to the collection of war debts. The country will not be permitted to forget that it was the Hoover Administration which granted that moratorium, and that the moratorium was construed by the debtor nations as an encouragement to their repudiation of their obligations to our Government. The blame for this blunder in the conduct of international affairs must rest chiefly where it belongs, namely, on the Sage of Palo Alto.

Republicans Accused of Fostering Monopoly.

The principal danger to the liberties both of the individual and the masses exists in the power of monopolies and trusts which, under the last three Republican Administrations, thrived and prospered with respect to both production and distribution. Nothing of importance was done during any one of the three administrations referred to, to check the tendency toward monopoly.

On the contrary, unfair business practices for the suppression of competition were indulged by large combinations without the slightest interference or restraint. It is at once amusing and shocking to witness this pretended devotion to sacred causes by the delegates to the convention, while they paraded and danced to the thrilling strains and inspiring sentiments of the Republican campaign song, "Oh, Suzanna don't you cry."

Your chairman is prompted by consideration of propriety to bring this speech to a close.

We do not fear any comparison which the opposition may make. We meet their challenge in the open, face to face. Democrats during the present administration have made a record of great things accomplished. We are not discouraged by the obstacles which have been thrown in the way. Our opponents, paralyzed with fear, did not even attempt to overcome the results of their own mistakes and follies, when the collapse of 1929 occurred. Keynoter Steiwer complains that Mr. Roosevelt, after his election, did not advise President Hoover and co-operate with him in the hours of the latter's extremity and failure.

Keynoter Steiwer denounces our leader as a President without conscience. President Roosevelt may not possess the kind of a conscience with which Republicans are familiar in their conduct of public affairs. He has, however, a conscience which takes note of the distress and helplessness of the feeble and the despairing. A conscience keenly alive to the necessity of maintaining the national honor; of promoting national happiness by repealing laws that have destroyed it, and by advocating measures designed to advance it.

Mr. William Allen White, sponsor of the Republican candidate, Gov. Landon, characterized his favorite in the article already quoted from as "The Dumb, Smiling Enigma Who Has America Guessing." That is not my characterization. It is the statement of the candidate's closest friend, made in an effort to prove that, in making demands to the committee on platform at Cleveland for the insertion of certain planks, and then in yielding those planks his candidate had suddenly demonstrated capacity for leadership.

Opponents sometimes denounce President Roosevelt as a dictator. No President has demonstrated a kindlier nature or more generous spirit than President Roosevelt. He has maintained amicable relations with every department of the Government. If he has been given extraordinary authority by law, it is because the Congress trusted him and regarded him as the best agent it could find.

On our record of pledges honestly redeemed, of services faithfully performed and under as gallant a leadership as ever raised a political banner, we advance to the battle of 1936 confident that the voters of the Nation will not turn back to the defeated and disheartened leadership, which abandoned them when the need for service, loyalty and courage was the greatest ever known.

Smith Protests Colored Pastor, Leaves Session

South Carolina Senator Walks Off Rally Floor at Invocation.

By the Associated Press.

He stormed out of the convention hall, followed by several others of the South Carolina delegation, when the Rev. Marshall Shepard, minister of a Philadelphia Baptist church, offered the invocation at the third session.

Angrily he declared he was "through" and would "go home and do some talking," adding that he was "sick of the whole damn business." But later in the day, in calmer mood, he said he would stay for further sessions, particularly to vote tomorrow for retention of the two-thirds nomination rule.

"I meant I'm through with the Negro business of the convention," Smith amended, "and I'll walk out whenever a Negro has a part."

Officials said that was the first time prayer had been offered at a Democratic convention by a colored person. The prayer was followed immediately by the playing of "Dixie."

Disagreement with Smith's attitude was expressed promptly by Claud Sapp, chairman of the State delegation.

"I don't care who prays for me," he asserted. "I'm willing for anyone to pray for me who wants to."

This development climaxed a stormy 24 hours of dissension between the Senator and Gov. Olin D. Johnston, the State's national committeeman, over seating arrangements for Smith.

Through a misunderstanding, there was no ticket or delegate's badge for Smith when he arrived late yesterday from Jacksonville, where he had attended the funeral of Senator Fletcher, of Florida.

The trouble apparently had been straightened out late last night, when a badge was sent to Smith—too late for use for the keynote address of Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky—but the Senator expressed renewed bitterness today.

"I have represented my State in the Senate for 27 years," he said, "and when I come to the convention of my party I find no badge, no reservations, no nothing."

The Senator also expressed resentment over the fact that he was not assigned to any of the convention's committees.

Johnston, who had expressed a desire to let the matter drop, heatedly retorted, "He better be thankful he got here as a delegate."

The Governor declined to discuss the possibility of a political break with Smith, and parried questions as to whether he would oppose the Senator for renomination in the State's Democratic primaries in 1938.

Against Equality.

Giving his views about the presence of colored persons, Smith said:

"The situation in the South before and since the Civil War makes it impossible for the South to recognize and accept the Negro as an equal political factor.

"Political equality means social equality and social equality means intermarriage and that means the mongrelizing of the American race.

"There isn't a man in America that has more regard for the Negro in his place than I have. But realizing the unspeakable danger inherent in this thing, I cannot and will not be a party to the recognition of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments (giving Negroes the right to vote and pledging there will be no discrimination against them).

"Nor will I support any political organization that looks upon the Negro and caters to him as a political and social equal."

Smith said the present tendency of the Democratic Party's Administration was to seek the vote of the colored race.

"We don't need it," he declared. "I'm through so far as I'm concerned."

Claude N. Sapp (left), chairman of the South Carolina delegation, shown as he made a futile attempt to "cool off" Senator E. D. Smith, of South Carolina, when latter, aroused by presence of colored delegates and opening of yesterday's session by a prayer by a colored minister, decided to "take a walk," declaring he was through with the convention. Later he amended his stand.

Home Town Gives Speaker Ovation

Jasper, Ala., June 24 (AP).—Climaxing a home town celebration of his election to the Speakership, William B. Bankhead said today he again would seek that office when the Seventy-fifth Congress convenes, "if I am alive and these people send me back to the House."

His neighbors and constituents gave him a rousing welcome this afternoon as he returned from Washington, where his colleagues in the House of Representatives named him as a successor to the late Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee.

W. H. Rainey, of the United Mine Workers of America, proposed a "Bankhead for President" 1940 movement, saying:

"They tell me that if Alabama will get on its toes, we can make William B. Bankhead the successor to the greatest humanitarian this country has ever seen—Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Thunderous applause greeted the statement.

Labor Appeals For Strong Civil Service Plank

Philadelphia, Pa., June 24.—Pleas for a strong civil service plank in the Democratic platform, submitted today by the National Federation of Federal Employes, the American Federation of Labor and various women's organizations, tonight were being weighed by a Democratic resolutions sub-committee.

Employe organizations were encouraged to believe that at least a general statement of civil service aims would be included, after Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, advocate of their cause, was appointed to the platform drafting sub-committee of 12.

"The merit system is essential to good government, and it is indispensable to democratic government," Luther C. Stewart, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, told the group.

Praises Civil Service.

"Long and costly experience has proved that there is no substitute for the merit system in Federal personnel administration. Civil service is the only assurance to the taxpayer of full value for every dollar expended."

Steward asked that the party pledge itself to extend civil service to all Federal positions which are not directly of a policy-making nature.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, in presenting a general labor plank, asked that Federal employes be "equitably and satisfactorily classified under civil service."

Cites Labor Backing.

"The devotion of labor to Civil Service, and the application of the Civil Service requirements to Government employes, inspires us earnestly to recommend its continuation and progressive extension to all departments of government," Green said.

Mrs. La Rue Brown, of Boston, of the National League of Women Voters, went a step farther and asked the committee to write a "spoils abolition-merit substitution" plank.

The league recommended a party pledge of abolition of the spoils system, full establishment of the merit system, and commitment to specific types of remedial legislation, such as placing first, second and third class postmasters under civil service. Repeal of section 213 of the economy act, which she charged discriminates against the employment of married women in the Civil Service. A similar plea was made by Miss Lena Phillips, of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

2 Indicted as Spies By U. S. Grand Jury

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP).—A man identified as "Toshio Miyazaki, a lieutenant-commander in the Japanese navy," and a former petty officer in the United States Navy, were indicted by the Federal grand jury today on charges of conspiring to violate the espionage act.

The other man indicted was Harry Thomas Thompson, formerly of the United States Navy.

Naval authorities said they believed Miyazaki is now in the Orient. Thompson is serving a county jail sentence here following his conviction on charges of illegally wearing a naval uniform

(The indictment charged the two men "unlawfully and feloniously conspired * * * to commit an offense against the United States." It stated the offense consisted of "communicating to a foreign government information relating to the national defense, with reason to believe and the intent that such things were to be used to the injury of the United States, and to the advantage of a foreign nation, to wit, Japan.")

Child With Nail in Lung Comes to U. S. for Aid

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP).—Kelvin Rogers, 3-year-old Australian, was in his bed at Temple University Hospital today after a 9,000-mile journey from "down under" to have a nail removed from his lung.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Marjorie Rogers, wife of a Boort, Australia, mechanic, said Kelvin was in no pain during the voyage from the nail he inhaled about 18 months ago. Physicians in his native land said he would not live unless the nail is removed.

Monkey Goes Wild, Biting 6 on Coast; Rabies Is Feared

By the Associated Press.

Placentia, Calif., June 24.—Because of a mad monkey's neighborhood rampage, five persons were under rabies treatment tonight and authorities sought a sixth victim, probprobably unaware of his danger.

The 10-pound Rhesus monkey was shot to death Sunday night after it had scampered into a church, scattered the congregation of 175 persons and scratched a high school girl.

Police marksmen pursued the animal and killed it as it sat in a choir room, tearing hymn bokos to shreds.

First victim of the monkey's sudden rage was Willis Hasson, its owner, bitten as the pet escaped Sunday afternoon.

From the Hasson home the monkey raced around the neighborhood, clawed J. T. Johndrew, a neighbor, who tried to catch it, and bit Esther Gonzales, 24, as it headed for the nearby church.

The animal dashed into the church just as evening services were drawing to a close. It bounded about in thet congregatoin and clawed Miss Bessie Jerome, high school girl, before seeking refuge in the choir room. Efforts of police to rout it with tear gas were unavailing.

Early last week the monkey bit Mrs. Thelma Silzle.

G. O. P. Chairman Takes Over Washington Headquarters

Underwood & Underwood.

"We'll win in a walk," was the broadside Chairman John Hamilton led off with yesterday when he gave his first interview to members of the Washington press who gathered at the Republican National Committee headquarters.

Rumor of Bolt Nonsense, Says Senator Glass

Here on Personal Matters, Returns to Convention Today, He Asserts.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, last night branded as "the darnedest nonsense" reports that he bolted the Democratic convention Tuesday, and announced he will return to Philadelphia today.

Weary of body—he attended the convention's opening against doctor's orders—and plagued by "bolt" and "walk" stories which sprang up Tuesday after he left the floor before Chairman James A. Farley finished his speech, the venerable Virginian told The Post he positively has no intention of leaving the party of which he is virtually a symbol.

"I returned to Washington Tuesday night," he said, "to attend to personal matters. All this talk about my 'walking out' is the darndest nonsense.

"Senator Byrd and myself have stated over and over that we will be regular and support the convention. I am going back to Philadelphia on a morning train."

Senaor Harry Flood Byrd, Glass' Virginia colleague, joined him in declining to serve on the pro-New Deal resolutions committee. Both voted against the President's tax bill and both, especially Senator Glass, have been bitterly critical of the Administration's monetary policy.

Byrd remained in Philadelphia as Glass came back to the Capital. The latter spent yesterday in seclusion in his suite at the Raleigh Hotel to avoid the corps of newspapermen who sought an explanation.

London Aids Tokyo In Navy Conference

Montreux, Switzerland, June 24 (AP).—The Anglo-Japanese alliance which perished at the Washington naval conference was revived temporarily tonight in an attempt to muzzle the naval might of Russia.

The crisis reached at the international Dardanelles conference was so serious that some delegates were pessimistic as to the outcome.

Great Britain was believed behind Tokyo's announced attitude that she was willing to accept any limitation concerning Japanese warships authorized to enter the Black Sea provided similar restrictions were placed on the exit of Russian warships.

Russia demanded free westward passage out of the Black Sea through the straits, and added she was unable to see why non-Black Sea powers desired unlimited passage to the Black Sea.

France was believed likely to side with Russia, because of her mutual assistance pact with the Soviet.

Mrs. Taylor Stanley Files Counter Divorce Suit

Cincinnati, June 24 (AP). — Mrs. Helen Poindexter Tillman Stanley filed a cross petition to her husband's divorce suit today charging him with gross neglect and extreme cruelty and asking permanent alimonly of $500,000. She is the daughter of Col. James Hammond Tillman, former lieutenant governor of South Carolina, a granddaughter of George D. Tillman, who served for 20 years in Congress from South Carolina, and a niece of United States Senator B. R. Tillman, of South Carolina.

She charged her husband, Taylor Stanley, secretary of the American Laundry Machinery Corporation, of Cincinnati, with slapping her when she objected to his buying drinks for chorus girls in two Cincinnati night clubs. She denied all charges made against her in her husband's petition. Stanley accused her of pawning valuables for gambling and of threatening the lives of himself and his father.

Chamberlin Will Wed Daughter of Senator

Fort Fairfield, Me., June 24 (AP).—Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-atlantic flier, announced tonight he and Miss Louise Ashby, 29, of Fort Fairfield, would be married in New York Saturday.

Miss Ashby, daughter of State Senator George F. Ashby and Chamberlin's former companion in commercial flying ventures, confirmed the announcement.

The announcement came only a few hours after Chamberlin's arrival here in his new plane, Miss Stratosphere, in which he said he hoped to make a sub-stratosphere flight to Europe late in July.

Transits, Otherwise Hoboes, Offer Plan For Federal Relief

"Transits," according to Dalton, are itinerant wanderers who go from place to place about the country asking for relief or work. "Transits are often called hoboes," Dalton said.

The program of the Hobo Fellowship is as follows:

"Continuation of transit relief or work. Four-hour day, five days a week, six months' vacation. Government shelter at cost for all unattached unemployed.

"Government free employment bureaus in all large cities."

Dalton stated he was backed by 1,000,000 "transits." He said: "Transits are often forced to beg, steal, or go to missions and charity organizations who do not understand the matter." He announced a mass convention of hoboes, or "transits," for New York City on June 29. He said lunch will be served free each day.

Piccard Balloon Found in Arkansas

Minneapolis, June 24 (AP).—Prof. John D. Akerman, head of the University of Minnesota aeronautical engineering department, tonight said he had been notified the Piccard stratosphere sounding balloon had been found near Huntsville, Ark., at 5 p. m.

Information regarding data contained in the instruments carried by the balloon was not given in the message received by Akerman. It carried no human cargo.

How high an altitude was gained was not learned, but Akerman said the balloon must have reached a point where winds were extremely high in velocity, since Huntsville is at least 800 miles by airline from Minneapolis.

The balloon, designed by Prof. Jean Piccard, a special instructor at the University of Minnesota, to demonstrate the efficiency of transparent balloons for stratosphere observations, was sent up from the university campus this morning.

It carried a micro-metrograph to record temperatures and pressures at high altitudes, and a small radio transmitter.

The radio failed, however. University engineering students, using a portable radio receiver, lost contact two and a half hours after the bag ascended and were unable to re-establish it.

Class at Homestead Hears Mrs. Roosevelt

Reedsville, W. Va., June 24 (AP).—A graduating class of three heard Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declare today, "You have to give every single thing in you to make life successful."

The two girls and one boy are the first graduates of the high school at Arthurdale, a homestead community sponsored by the Federal Government. They are children of one-time coal miners moved to the little community in northern West Virginia's hills after lack of business forced their fathers from work in the mines.

Both Nominees Are Denounced By Communists

Would Stop Landon at All Costs, Drive Roosevelt Farther to Left.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—Definitely placing itself in the Presidential fight between the two major parties, the Communist Party today started a "stop Landon at all cost" movement and sharply attacked President Roosevelt in an effort to drive him progressively to the left.

While the 725 delegates to the ninth national convention cheered their approval, Earl Browder, secretary and keynoter of the party, called for the momentary forsaking of the full Socialist program in the interest of practical politics.

"The Communist Party," Browder said, "differentiates between Landon—our chief enemy—and Roosevelt.

"We must fight to take votes from Landon even though they go to Roosevelt.

Says He Needs Leftists.

"Roosevelt fights reaction only to the degree he needs to hold the Leftist forces; to support him invites his further retreat from progressivism."

Browder, almost certain to be the party's candidate for the Presidential nomination, indicated that the Communists would use their national ticket, recognizing the sureness of success by one of the major parties, to help the Farmer-Labor "people's front" win local elections.

After a short ovation, the delegates sat silent about small round tables in the convention hall of the Manhattan Opera House while Browder outlined their political course.

It was not until he swung into a description of "the progress toward the revolution" that applause and cheering became frequent and prolonged.

At recurring mention of the names "Lenin" and "Stalin," and references to "the class war" and "the struggle of the masses," the delegates shouted their approval.

The convention was opened by William Z. Foster, national chairman and thrice Presidential candidate, calling for an alignment of all the progressive forces to fight Fascism and the dangers of war.

Foster, recovering from a severe illness, has indicated that he will not press his candidacy, leaving Browder a clear field.

The representatives of the party's 30,000 members will formally adopt a platform and nominate their national ticket in a mass meeting Sunday afternoon at Madison Square Garden.

Knox to Accept Second Ticket Place July 30

Chicago Scene of Rite; Hamilton Confident on Visit Here.

Col. Frank Knox will be notified in Chicago on July 30 that he is the Republican nominee for Vice President, John D. M. Hamilton, the new Republican national chairman, announced here yesterday at a press conference. The news will be broken to Col. Knox with suitable fanfare and pageantry, Hamilton said, but the site for the celebration has not yet been selected. It may be the great stadium at Soldier Field, he said.

Perched on a desk and waving his arms with the enthusiasm of a college cheer leader, the youthful chairman discussed the approaching Presidential election. He predicted the Republicans will carry "all but six or seven States, and I wouldn't be surprised if they took them all."

On second thought, however, he did concede the Democrats two States—Mississippi and South Carolina. All the Western States are "in the bag" because of the strength of Gov. Alf. M. Landon and Col. Knox, he declared.

Expects Western Sweep.

"The basic issues are far more fundamental than they were in 1928," and for that reason, he expects the Republican party to sweep not only the West, but all States east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio, and most of the section south of the Potomac.

Turning to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, Hamilton took issue with a keynote statement by Senator Barkley that "only a few little pigs were killed, and only a few rows of cotton were plowed under" through the Democratic agricultural program.

"The record shows," Hamilton said, "that 6,600,000 little pigs were killed, and in 1933 alone 10,400,000 acres of cotton were plowed under. That would make a mighty lot of cotton rows. They haven't gotten around to figure the cotton plowed under in other years," he said.

Hamilton declared that Postmaster General Farley had said exactly what he expected him to say in Philadelphia, and he added, "I never saw a crowd so politically scared in all my life."

The candidacy of Representative William Lemke on the Union ticket holds no terrors for the Republicans, the chairman said. "For every vote Lemke takes from the Repubicans I estimate he will take from six to nine from the Democrats. That's a fair and accurate statement, I think."

Republican headquarters for the campaign will be moved from Washington to Chicago next week, he revealed. Only a skeleton office, with not more than two people employed, will be retained in the Capital.

Asked if former Gov. Joseph B. Ely (Democrat-, of Massachusetts, would speak for Landon in the New England States, Hamilton said no plans had been made or conferences held, but that "everyone would have a chance to say a word."

Hepburn Becomes Fleet Commander

A mild-mannered, business-like officer, Admiral Arthur Japy Hepburn, stood on the quarterdeck of the dreadnaught flagship Pennsylvania and read the President's order making him commander in chief. He is one of the Navy's most distinguished strategists.

A white-bearded man of the sea, Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, gave up his command with a gesture of an oid, disctoinued custom. He was rowed a mile and a half to shore in a cutter, his oarsmen being the members of his staff, just like the old admirals of past centuries left their ships.

The retiring commander and his staff were in civilian attire. He goes to Washington to serve on the naval general board, with the rank of rear admiral, until his retirement later in the year.

Thomas O. Lyddane, just three months shy of 88 and therefore a likely possibility in the quest of the 'oldest Democrat,' who voted in Washington when it had a franchise, feasted yesterday on convention news by means of the radio and The Post.

Thomas Lyddane, 88, May Win Prize as Oldest D. C. Democrat

With competition thickening, a "dark horse" who clearly remembers Lincoln's assassination and Gen. Jubal Early's raid on Washington slipped through on the rail yesterday and took the lead as the search for the District's oldest Democratic voter neared a climax.

Maybe some older voter will assert himself between now and the Roosevelt Nominators' celebration Saturday night, but, until he does, Thomas O. Lyddane, of 50 Nicholson street northwest, would seem to have that bottle of 1873 vintage wine clinched.

"Only I don't drink wine," said Mr. Lyddane, who will be 88 in September. "I eat anything I please but I don't drink, except maybe a glass of beer once in a while."

He did not say, however, that if he is the winner he will refuse to accept the wine, which is being reserved for the oldest living Washingtonian who voted the Democratic ticket in the Capital's last popular election in 1872.

A visitor yesterday found the retired leather goods merchant seated before a radio set which was blaring out the proceedings of the Philadelphia convention. In his lap lay the latest edition of The Post.

"First thing I looked at," he said, "was the convention news. I have never stopped being a Democrat."

But was he a Roosevelt Democrat?

"You bet I am. He's the right man."

Lyddane was born in Rockville, Md., in 1848. In 1863, when the Civil War was at its height, the family moved to Georgetown. They made the trip on foot.

In that swan song 1872 election, Lyddane remembers casting his Democratic ballot at Ninth and K streets northwest. His political leanings may possibly be explained by the fact he and his family were Southern sympathizers, a brother having fought for the Confederate cause.

Although he is in tip-top physical condition—"I've never been sick a day"—the octogenarian isn't sure whether he is up to the excitement of riding in Saturday's torchlight parade, an honor which goes to the oldest voter along with the wine, and watching the celebration at Griffith Stadium.

Other candidates for the prizes are Richard O. Melton, 87, 2018 First street northwest; George Combs, 86, 916 Sixteenth street northwest; John A. Schultz, 84, Seat Pleasant, Md., and Richard F. Bickerton, 85, 100 Fourth street southeast.

Bickerton's candidacy was announced Tuesday and the others were uncovered yesterday.

Meanwhile all was in readiness for the torchlight parade Saturday night of the Roosevelt Nominators.

Landon Starts Vacation Trip To the Rockies

Carries Material to Write Speech of Acceptance; Family Is Along.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, June 24.—With books, fishing tackle, an old hat—and material for his acceptance speech—packed, Gov. Alf M. Landon entrained tonight toward a precampaign vacation in the Colorado Rockies.

The Republican Presidential nominee quit his office at noon to join Mrs. Landon in final preparations for the trip, which will take the family to the McGraw Ranch, near Estes Park.

The Governor, Mrs. Landon, their two small children, Nancy Jo and John Cobb, and Peggy Anne, Gov. Landon's daughter by a previous marriage, and Mrs. Landon's mother, Mrs. S. E. Cobb, formed the vacation party.

The afternoon press conference was canceled that he might do last minute chores.

The Governor's vacation will end July 6, when he returns to Topeka for a special session of the State Legislature, convening the next day, to act on a proposed social security amendment.

Although he expressed a desire to spend much of his vacation time fishing, reading and resting, the Governor planned to work on his speech of acceptance during the holiday. Acceptnce ceremonies will be held here July 23 and will signal the opening of a campaign which is expected to take him on an early speaking tour in the East.

The vacation train also carried a delegation of newspapermen and members of the Governor's staff. It will arrive in Denver tomorrow at 9:30 a. m., Eastern standard time, where it will be met by a party of Colorado Republicans.

Capone's Assailant Will Be Disciplined

San Francisco, June 24 (AP).—Alcatraz Prison's own particular brand of punishment probably will be applied to James C. Lucas, Texas "bad man" for carving a new scar on Al Capone.

Both Warden James A. Johnston and United States Attorney H. H. McPike indicated today there would be no criminal prosecution since the former Chicago gang chief was only superficially wounded.

The Alcatraz warden, reporting Capone "all right" and Lucas "possibly having a few pangs of remorse," said he would take up the punishment matter with Washington authorities and that the Texas robber doubtless would be "restricted."

Lucas already is "restricted." He was put into solitary confinement immediately after he plunged a scissors blade into Capone's back yesterday.

If the usual prison discipline is applied, Lucas probably will continue in solitary, on a bread-and-water diet.

Parents Favor Early Opening At D. C. Schools

Poll Shows 29,109 Votes Ask for 8:30 Instead of 9:00 A. M. Start.

Washington parents in a poll on their attitude regarding a proposed change in the hour for opening schools show strong sentiment for changing the hou. from 9 a. m., the opening time now in effect, to 8:30.

Report of the poll, representing more than 61,000 of the 90,000 public school pupils, was submitted by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, to the Board of Education at its meeting yesterday afternoon.

The poll was prompted by a request of Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, for cooperation on the part of the schools in the elimination of traffic congestion in the District.

Ballou's report showed there were 29,109 votes (parents voted once for each child) in favor of opening at 8:30 a. m.; 13,224 votes favored opening at 9:30 a. m., and 18,881 votes were cast in favor of the existing opening hour, 9 a. m.

No Majority Vote.

The superintendent pointed out that while more votes were cast for advancing the opening 30 minutes, the number did not represent a majority vote. Votes cast for either of the other two hours totaled more than 32,000, as compared to the 29,109 in favor of the early hour.

While 31 per cent of the number of pupils in school are not represented in the poll, Ballou told the board he considered it a "reasonable expression of opinion" from the parents.

The board received the report, and tabled it for later action.

A report from a teacher sub-committee investigating the magazine Scholastic cleared the periodical of charges that it is communistic.

"We have been unable to find any evidence in the contents of the magazine that it is communistic or advocates communism," the committee, of which Miss Ruth M. Stauffer, head of the department of English, was chairman, concluded.

The board, however, did not act on the continued use of the magazine in the local schools. That action was deferred until after September 1, when, according to Dr. Ballou, there is to be a change in the form of the publication.

Data Summary.

A summary of data furnished by the teachers in response to information requested last winter by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, was submitted to the board. It showed that the 7,000 teachers had attended college and universities in nearly every State in the Union, and in several foreign countries. A total of 111 reported they had attended schools in 12 European countries. Russia was not one of the countries.

The "no-home-work" experiment conducted during the last six weeks of school at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School was reported favorably by Chester W. Holmes, principal. Holmes recommended that official permission be granted to continue the experiment for a full year, beginning next September. He said teachers and students had expressed a willingness to carry the program on.

The experiment involved reorganizing the class schedule to provide more time for supervised study in school. Holmes said the plan materially reduced the amount of home work pupils found necessary.

Capital Man Gets $1,000 Verdict in Auto Crash

Leesburg, Va., June 24.—A jury in Loudoun County Circuit Court today awarded Francis R. Stephens, of Washington, $1,000 in his suit against Gordon A. Chamblin, truck owner, of Purcellville, from whom he was asking $30,000 for injuries received when he claimed that the automobile in which he was riding with a party of friends on the night of September 28, 1935, collided with one of Chamblin's trucks on the Leesburg-Washington pike.

The two-day case was given to the jury at 4 p. m. and the verdict was returned in one hour.

Indictments Sought In Prison Guard Slaying

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—Bills of indictment charging eight convicts with murder in connection with the death of a State Prison guard in an attempted escape last week are slated to be laid before a special city circuit court jury Monday. The jury of seven was drawn today.

The guard, who died in the convicts' frustrated effort to escape, was Powhatan D. Bass, who was killed by the gunfire of another guard as he fired at a truck which the convicts had commandeered. Bass was carried as a hostage inside.

New Arlington Postoffice Set, Smith Reports

Building for County to Be Located in Vicinity of Clarendon.

Arlington County is to have a $200,000 postoffice building, according to an announcement yesterday by Representative Howard W. Smith.

The funds are allocated for the building from the $60,000,000 emergency contingent fund authorized by Congress under the first deficiency act. The bill was signed by the President on Monday.

Smith indicated that the building will be located in the vicinity of Clarendon.

The county's new central office will have its temporary quarters in the present Clarendon branch of the Washington Postoffice.

After hearing testimony on the temporary injunction against the Hangar Club, located at the south end of the Highway Bridge, for nearly two days, Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday enjoined the club from selling or dispensing any alcholic beverages. The period of time the restraining order will be in effect has not been set by the Court.

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan said yesterday there is a possibility that he will not make his recommendation for the appointment of a county fire chief by July 1. The county budget, effective on that date, provides a salary for a fire chief, the first paid chief in the history of the county.

Hanrahan said that he is studying the question of a paid chief and is drawing up regulations and policies for the office.

Addressing the Clarendon Businessmen's Association Tuesday night, County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan declared the traffic conditions in Clarendon are no different than they are in practically every section of the country.

He stated that he was opposed to any plan calling for the widening of a short section of Wilson boulevard, but as a means of relieving the congestion he offered the plan of widening, grading and laying curb and gutter along North Irving, North Hudson, North Herndon and North Highland streets. This, he pointed out, would provide parking facilities on both sides of the streets.

He also advocated changing the angle parking on the south side of Wilson boulevard to parallel. He pointed out that parallel parking was being adopted in nearly all sections of the country and which also aids in relieving congestion.

County Engineer C. L. Kinnier outlined plans for the widening, resurfacing and laying of curb and gutters along the four streets mentioned. He said the approximate cost would be $800 a block.

The association went on record as favoring the improvement as proposed along the four streets and J. E. Rice was appointed chairman of a special committee to confer with the county manager prior to it being presented to the county board.

Saved From Cave, Youth Recovering

Annapolis, Md., June 24 (AP).—Vernon Derr, 18, who was saved by six youths when he was trapped in the sand caves along the Severn River, near Herald Harbor, was discharged from the Emergency Hospital today and returned to his home in Baltimore.

Derr was brought to the hospital late yesterday in the West Annapolis ambulance suffering from shock. He was unconscious when brought from the caves but had been revived by his rescuers.

The sand caves were made years ago when the sand was mined for commercial purposes. Derr was buried deep in one of the tunnels by a cave-in. The six youths who saved him crawled into the tunnel and shoveled away the sand, finally seizing his legs and pulling him free.

Arthur Cutten Dies; Famous In Grain Deals

'Little Giant of Wheat Pits' Was 66; Retired From Market Last Month.

Chicago, June 24 (AP). — Death early today ended the spectacular career of Arthur W. Cutter, 66—"Little Giant of the Wheat Pits"—who rose from $7 a week clerk to international note as one of the greatest speculators of the century.

He died from a heart attack in his Lakeside Hotel apartment at 1:50 a. m. (E. S. T.) with his wife, the former Maude Boomer, of Chicago, beside him. They had no children.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at St. James Episcopal Church. Bishop George Craig Stewart will officiate. A committee of 19 members was appointed to represent the Board of Trade. Cutten's favorite trading spot and scene of his most widely heralded coups. Burial will be Friday at the little Canadian city of Guelph, where the famed trader was born and which had been a recipient of his benefactions.

Retired From Market.

Confined to his apartment for months by a heart ailment, Cutten had announced a month ago his retirement from the market activities in which he had won a fortune estimated as high as $100,000,000 and lost almost as rapidly—but not so heavily that he was unable to recoup later—when the stock slump caught him on the wrong side.

As a youth Cutten was fired by the rise of his fellow Guleph native, James J. Hill, the railroad king, to ambition which carried him to Chicago at the age of 20. From a $7 a week clerkship he plugged on until he acquired a membership on the Board of Trade. Then for 30 years he was an active operator there, always keeping his own counsel and directing his huge deals from an obscure little office.

Netted $2,000,000.

Buying at 70 cents a bushel corn that nearly everyone figured would drop in price, but which he sold at $1.10 in 1924, netted him $2,000,000. This transaction was La Salle street's favorite story of his astuteness, but he made other "killings" in wheat and mammoth stock market profits in the early 20s. As a bear during the early days of the depression he recovered much of the losses he reportedly sustained in the stock crash of 1929.

His later deals brought him into conflict with the Government on charges of failing to report grain futures holdings valued at about $50,000,000 in 1930 and 1931. Ordered barred from the pits, he carried the case to the United States Supreme Court and emerged victorious last month. Today Assistant United States District Attorney Carl R. Perkins said criminal charges of violating income tax statutes by alleged failure to report in full his profits would be stricken from the docket, but that civil claims for more than $600,000 probably would be pursued before the probate court of Cook County.

Group Studies Water Report In Alexandria

Council Committee Also Airs Proposed Installation of New Mains.

The water committee of the city council met yesterday in the council chamber and discussed the recent report of the survey on water conditions made by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and also the question of installation of water mains to a new plant on the river front in the northeastern section of the city, now being erected.

The committee will submit its findings to the council at its next regular meeting. The Board of Fire Underwriters made a number of recommendations, and called attention to several unsatisfactory conditions.

The water committee is composed of George K. Bender, chairman; A. Slater Lamond and John D. Matter.

A special meeting of the city council will be held tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. to consider the question of the city taking over the Alexandria Library.

A committee consisting of A. Slater Lamond, Judge Louis C. Barley and John D. Matter had been appointed to meet with a committee of the library to consider their proposition of turning over the library to the city, together with an endowment fund, the city to provide a suitable building and to maintain the institution as a free library, at an estimated cost of $6,000 a year.

The committee had voted on an adverse report, feeling that the city could not assume an additional obligation of $6,000 a year, but Chairman Lamond asked that it not be considered at this time, since he believed there is more to the question than the committee at first believed.

A marker for the burial place of Dr. Elisha Cullen Dick, intimate friend and physician of George Washington, and who attended him at the time of his death, is to be erected by the Women's Auxiliary of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. A request to erect the marker was made in the form of a letter to the city council, but a question was raised as to the authority of the council to grant the request, and the matter was referred to the city attorney for an opinion.

Dr. Dick, in addition to serving with Washington throughout the Revolution and being his personal physician, succeeded him as worshipful master of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, and conducted the Masonic ceremony at the funeral of Washington.

Several years ago this cemetery was taken over for use as a playground, but owing to complaints from neighboring property owners this was abandoned.

Heroic Phone Girls Win Medals For 52-Hr. Vigil During Flood

By the Associated Press.

Federalsburg, Md., June 24.—This town's two phone operators today wore the Theodore Newton Vail Medal given by the telephone company for heroism in keeping phone communications open or for other meritorious service.

The operators are Mrs. Mary M. Wheatley and Reba F. Pusey. For 52 hours they worked at their switchboards last September, while 9 feet of water swirled through the streets of the town below them.

In addition to the medal, each of the two women was given a gold pin bearing the same impression as the medal.

During the more than two days that the operators remained at their posts, food was taken to them in boats. The town was flooded by marshy Pope Creek after a sudden, heavy rain. The phone lines provided the only link with the outside during this period, and enabled relief and rescue work to be prosecuted.

Craig Stresses 'Bold Thinking' Value in Army

Bold, independent thinking on the part of United States Army officers was urged yesterday by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, at the graduation exercises of the Army War College.

Preceding his address to the 93 graduates, the largest class in the history of the college, Gen. Craig announced that Brig. Gen. Walter S. Grant had been appointed commandant of the college. Gen. Grant has been acting commandant since last October, when Gen. Craig, then the commandant, was made Chief of Staff.

Immediately after the exercises, Commander V. C. Griffin, one of the naval officers attached to the college, was relieved of duty there and took over the command of the Naval Air Station at Anacostia.

Among the many outstanding Army officers in the graduating class were Col. Barton K. Yount and Lieut. Col. George H. Brett, of the Air Corps, both of whom were promoted to be temporary brigadier generals last week.

Warning against being overcautious in times of war, Gen. Craig cited the victories of Stonewall Jackson and Napoleon as examples of the advantages of bold, unorthodox offensives.

"The prudent commander always will want to be sure of keeping open his line of communication, certain of his reserves, be assured of correct disposition of his forces, with guaranteed artillery support at the proper time and place," said Gen. Craig.

"But before he has completed all of these detailed arrangements," he added, "a more resourceful and less meticulous foe may attack and spoil all his fine plans. Look before you leap is a peace-time maxim that has its application in war. However, too long a look may be just as fatal as a bad jump. If one waits until everything is ready for an attack he always may be on the defensive. McClellan always was preparing to fight, but he never was quite ready.

"It is more important to win a battle than to be consistent. It is better to be an unorthodox victor than to be a regular and defeated. A cautious commander may save his army; the bold leader is likely to save his country. The country's fate is more important than the general's reputation. Action always is preferable to inertia.

"At our schools there always is the danger that the student may be shooting at the approved solution rather than at the enemy. I would not regard it as a calamity if a bold and imaginative student arrived at a better solution than the one approved by the faculty. Our officers should not be apostles of the obvious. Almost anything is preferable to dull mediocrity."

A graduate of the Military Academy in 1900, Gen. Grant has specialized as a Cavalry officer. He saw action in the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer rebellion and the World War. He was with the First Division at Cantigny and with the Second Division at Chateau-Thierry. During the Meuse-Argonne offensive he served as deputy chief of staff. For his war service he received the Distinguished Service Medal, the French Legion of Honor and the Belgian Order of Leopold.

Lines Ask Extension Of Emergency Rates

Richmond, a., June 24 (AP).—The State corporation commission took under advisement, after a hearing today, the application of rail carriers in Virginia for an extension of emergency charges on intra-State shipments from June 30 to December 31.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized the extension on interstate shipments, with certain exceptions, and the State commission was asked to concur.

J. E. Moore, of Washington, statistician of the bureau of railway economics, testified at the hearing that the extension is necessary in order that railways may meet increased operating costs.

State Employe Fired For Outside Connection

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—James G. Ruth, of Grasonville, Md., deputy commander of a conservation patrol boat, has been dismissed, Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones announced today. The action was taken on the basis of two violations of the merit system rules, Jones said.

He said Ruth, an employe of the conservation department since 1929, had engaged in the oyster business with his son in the vicinity he was supposed to patrol, and had leased oyster beds in the name of his son.

Blue Dress Uniform Considered by Army

Army officers are soon to be placed on a sartorial par with their brethren in the Navy and Mrine Corps.

The adoption of a new blue dress uniform for officers and enlisted men similar to those used before the World War, is being considered, the War Department announced yesterday. Studies are being made on a newly-designed tunic of rolled-collar design to replace the olive-drab field uniform now used.

In explaining that there has been a "persistent and growing demand in the Army for a return to the historic blue," the War Department announcement pointed out that "men and officers have felt themselves at a distinct disadvantage when associated out of ranks with their more smartly attired brethren of the Navy and Mrine Corps.

Willis Lephew Dies; District Patrolman

Policeman Willis Lephew, 67, of 5 Midhurst road, Silver Spring, Md., died in Walter Reed Hospital of pneumonia yesterday. Lephew, attached to the Harbor Precinct, had been ill since June 16, shortly after he returned from a plane trip to New York, where he visited his son, Richard.

Outstanding in his 33 years service with the force, Lephew was commended for bravery and resourcefulness during the floods last March. He joined the force July 1, 1903, in the days of horse-drawn patrol wagons, blue police derbies and the night-stick signal code.

A native of Frankfort, Ky., he had served throughout the Spanish-American War.

Surviving Lephew are his wife, Mrs. Minnie Lephew; two sons, Richard, of New York, and Walter, of Washington, and one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Knox, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery at a date to be announced later.

Hagerstown Brewery Reorganization Likely

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—Reorganization of the Hagerstown Brewing Co. was assured today when Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut indicated he would approve the reorganization plan.

After a hearing on the case, he said the company unquestionably was insolvent and that it must either reorganize or be ruined.

William J. Grove was appointed permanent trustee and the judge named Stanley Walton, brother of the president of the company, as manager. Charles D. Walton is the president. Special claims against the company will be heard July 10.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

System of Rule In U. S. Called Old-Fashioned

Kiwanis Group Hears Plea for More Efficient Government.

The United States is still in the horse and buggy days in Government procedure, Merlin H. Hunter, professor of economics at the University of Illinois, told Kiwanians yesterday in a group discussion of economy and efficiency in local government.

"In our private business," Hunter said, "we abolish a department if it becomes obsolete and if departments are too numerous to be efficient we combine and reorganize them. But in government we are still in the horse and buggy days. We pour more than 30 per cent of our income into it, but from the attention most of us give to the efficiency and economy of its operation one would think it did not cost us a cent."

The professor of economics praised the movement towards "a real civil service which will insure both capacity to perform and permanency of position.

He told the Kiwanians they can render no greater public service to their communities than to get the facts as to governmental costs and service.

Economy Program.

"Upon the basis of these facts," he said, "a constructive program for economy and efficiency can be waged. Some are advocating curtailment in the activities of government. 'Take the Government out of business' has become a slogan with these people. Are they advocating that the Government should no longer provide education, highways, recreation, protection or many other functions? Do we insist that budgets be prepared and observed? Have we placed proper restrictions upon the amount our governmental managers can borrow? These are the questions each of us must decide in a democracy."

Other group discussions yesterday dealt with agriculture, schools and education for the new leisure.

Joseph A. Frohock, of Bradentown, Fla., advocated a back-to-the-land movement and said relief costs will continue to mount until the unemployed now on relief "get back to the land where they can feed themselves."

Efforts Being Made.

"These idle millions cannot be placed on the land overnight," he said, "but constructive efforts to bring about this change are now being made in many sections of the country."

Frohock, chairman of the Kiwanis committee on agriculture, urged the members of the service club to try to convince boys and girls that they "will probably be far ahead of the game if they can get located where they can earn for themselves plenty of wholesome food and the health-giving vigor of the great outdoors."

"The youth of our country should be shown that the cities today are overcrowded both physically and in lack of opportunities," Frohock said.

Mark A. Smith, of Thomaston, Ga., told the group discussing schools that it pays in dollars and cents for businessmen to advocate education, since "the educated person enjoys and buys the best, from which comes the highest possible profits."

Minnesota Contest Snarls Convention

Philadelphia, June 24.—The contest over the seating of the Minnesota delegation caused the first hitch in the well-oiled program of the Democratic National Convention here tonight.

Report of the committee on credentials and permanent organization was scheduled to open the program, but at the beginning of the session Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, temporary chairman, announced that the report would be delayed. At the conclusion of the meeting he said the report would not be submitted until tomorrow and that there might be some discussion from the floor.

Two complete delegations were sent from the State, one headed by Representative Ryan and one by Joseph Wolf, now national committeeman. The national committee decided that both delegations should be seated, giving each delegate a half vote. This was not satisfactory to some of the delegates.

The credentials committee agreed with the national group and recommended that John P. Erickson, of Duluth, should be named national committeeman.

It is possible that the fight will be carried to the floor when the report is made tomorrow.

West Virginian Asked To Aid Roosevelt Drive

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP).—Louis Johnson, of Clarksburg, W. Va., a former national commander of the American Legion, has been offered the post of directing a campaign of war veterans for the re-election of President Roosevelt.

It was not known whether he would accept.

This was disclosed tonight as war veterans attending the Democratic National Convention were summoned to a conference to chart the campaign.

They gathered at Convention Hall under the leadership of Johnson, who was asked to preside over the session by James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Howard Quits as Head Of Newspaper Chain

New York, June 24 (AP).—The retirement of Roy W. Howard, as chairman of the board of directors of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers was announced today.

At the same time, Robert P. Scripps announced the selection of William W. Hawkins, general manager, to succeed Howard as chairman.

The announcement stated:

Kiwanian Roosevelt Greets Members of Convention

Kiwanians and their wives interrupted convention proceedings long enough yesterday to call on President Roosevelt, who, in an address from the south portico of the White House, congratulated them on their work in behalf of crippled children.

sands of young men eager for careers, for any police department to be composed of ignorant, lazy, inefficient personnel. The time is coming, and coming rapidly in America, when law enforcement shall be looked upon for what is really is—a career, a profession of honor and achievement."

Hoover deplored the laxity in the parole system, saying:

"Every two and a half hours prison doors swing open to release a murderer and every second man of this released army of slayers has been freed by some sort of clemency. The taking of human life in America has become so cheapened that even if a person is convicted, the average penalty for having robbed a human being of his life is little more than that supposed to be inflicted for the theft of a motor car."

Clinic Presented.

Following Hoover's address and election of officers, presided over by the international president, Harper Gatton, of Madisonville, Ky., the Kiwanis Club of Washington presented a clinic on the under-privileged child.

About 30 crippled children, who received treatment at Children's Hospital through arrangement by the Kiwanis, were seated on the stage and heard one of their group—12-year-old Mildred Petrey, announce that Washington Kiwanians have spent $45,936.05 and have held 690 clinics for handicapped youngsters.

Little Miss Petrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Petrey, of 3822 Fifth street northwest, was introduced by Robert F. Fleming, chairman of the Washington club's under-privileged child committee.

The pageant last night in Constitution Hall, planned by Mark Lansburgh of the local convention committee, was the last entertainment feature of the convention. It was followed by dancing at the Mayflower.

At the concluding session this morning Will Durant, author, will speak on "The Crisis in American Civilization" and trophies will be presented to the winners of the convention attendance and achievement contests.

Kiwanians Urge Deportation Law

Tightening of immigration laws to authorize deportation of alien criminals was advocated yesterday by delegates to the Kiwanis International convention in a strongly worded resolution adopted at the morning business session.

The delegates also suggested a wider discretionary power for immigration officials in deportation cases involving hardships for American-born wives and children.

Other resolutions called for universal compulsory finger-printing and wider participation in public affairs by all members of Kiwanis.

The convention also urged "a better understanding of the common problems of Canada and the United States" and pledged itself to "every practical effort" to establish friendly relations among nations.

Langer Is Trailing In Dakota Primary

Returns from 66 precincts of 2,242 in the State tonight gave Welford 4,770 and Langer 2,883.

John Moses, regular Democratic indorsed gubernatorial candidate, and Ole H. Olson, former acting Governor and a "Progressive" group candidate, were running close on returns from 17 precincts which gave Moses 306 votes and Olson 214. James F. Morrow, Independent, had 25 votes.

Langer and Welford are fighting for control of the Nonpartisan League within the Republican Party and both factions have slates of candidates for most State offices.

Representative William Lemke and Usher L. Burdick had no opposition for the Republican nomination for Congress and were indorsed by both league factions.

Townsend Strategists Back Foe of Borah

Boise, Idaho, June 24 (AP).—Byron Defenbach, former Republican State treasurer, was indorsed today by Dr. Francis E. Townsend's State board of strategy as a candidate for the United States Senate seat William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, has occupied for 30 years.

Two crippled girls who attend the Kiwanis clinic for crippled children last night limped across the stage at Constitution Hall to capture the hearts of 4,000 Kiwanians and their families.

Trained dancers put on an elaborate pageant as the final entertainment feature of the Kiwanis International convention, but it was these two, surprise curtain raisers for the program, who stole the show.

First came Grace Vitality, 16, of 1301 Taylor street northwest. She had difficulty crossing the huge stage to the microphone, but her clear soprano voice sent a thrill through the audience. Only their president's intervention kept them from demanding more than one encore as Grace threw them a kiss in gratitude for their cheers.

Then came 12-year-old Mildred Petrey, dressed in filmy white with a big fluffy red bow in her blonde curls. Not until late yesterday afternoon did she herself know she was to appear before the crowded auditorium.

No Trace of Shyness.

She told a reporter afterward that her throat went dry, but she gave no evidence of shyness as she recited a spirited speech on the work of the Kiwanis clinic of which Robert F. Fleming is chairman.

Mildred, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Petrey, of 3822 Fifth street northwest, has been told that she probably will be able to walk some day without crutches. She has been receiving treatment from Dr. Custis Lee Hall, the club's orthopedic surgeon, for six years.

"Kiwanis, from my observation," said little Miss Petrey, "consists of big, busy men, doing lovely things for little boys and girls who can't always help themselves."

She then told her huge audience that more than 500 underprivileged children in the Capital have been benefited by operations, nursing, hospitalization, the fitting of orthopedic and other appliances, and by outings and other aids, all through the generosity of "the busy business and professional men who are the Kiwanis Club."

Traces Clinic's History.

Mildred traced the history of the clinic, saying it began in 1923 and that Dr. Hall performed his first operation as a Kiwanian on April 3 of that year.

"Since that time," she said, "our beloved doctor has devoted 625 days' time out of his busy practice to us 'Kiwanis children.' Do you wonder that all of us have a great love and affection for this kindly man who has made so many of us well?"

The young speaker also told of the Weightman School, for white handicapped children, and the Magruder School for colored handicapped children, which were established largely through the efforts of Kiwanis. Mildred attends the Weightman School.

As the little girl in white with the gay red hair ribbon limped off the stage there were as many tear-filled eyes as there were applauding hands.

Earlier in the day Mildred, with 29 other children of the Kiwanis clinic, were taken to the south lawn of the White House to hear President Roosevelt address the members of the service club and their families.

Al Smith Leaves On Mystery Trip

New York, June 24 (AP).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, left town on an unannounced trip today, but close associates denied rumors that he was en route to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

Commenting on the rumors, Bainbridge Colby, who joined Smith and three other dissenting members of the party last Sunday in a plea for the nomination of a "genuine" Democrat to replace President Roosevelt, said it would be a "very gallant thing" for Mr. Smith to go to the convention, but added that he was not advised of any such plan.

At Smith's home in an upper Fifth avenue apartment house, it was said he had left with a traveling bag this morning and had not returned.

His sudden departure led to speculation as to whether he was bound on some mission concerned with last Sunday's implied threat to bolt the party if Mr. Roosevelt is renominated.

New Evidence Faces Suspect In Kurz Case

'Confession' of Defendant Is Recognized at Slaying Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 24.—Two versions of the fatal beating the Government charges Earl Conner Williams, 24-year-old colored man, inflicted on Miss Fannie Kurz in Fredericksburg Battlefield Park were read into his trial in Federal district court today, and attorneys were arguing the admissibility of a third when adjournment was taken.

Over the persistent opposition and formal objection of defense counsel, the Government placed in evidence an alleged confession Williams is said to have made after his arrest at Iuka, Miss., on May 28, 1935, a little more than a year after the crime.

A different story, in which the prisoner was said to have implicated another Negro, now serving a life term in the State penitentiary, was attributed to him by a prosecution witness.

A second confession which Justice Department agents said Williams made and signed after being transported from Iuka to Birmingham, Ala., was argued with the jury excluded. Just before adjournment, Judge Luther B. Way ruled the Government had established the statement as freely and voluntarily given, and the prosecution prepared to insist on its admission tomorrow.

Died Four Days Later.

Miss Kurz was beaten unconscious in the park on a moonlight night in May, 1934, and died four days later. Milton Brown, her fiance, was beaten and required medical attention for months. He said he suffered loss of memory concerning events immediately preceding the blow.

Bureau of Investigation men set to work on the case because the assault occurred on Government property. Williams was arrested in the Mississippi town because of suspicious actions about parked cars. Federal agents said they obtained confessions, and he was brought back to Virginia for trial.

J. A. Robey, special agent for the Bureau of Investigation, former Sheriff I. M. Jackson and former Deputy Sheriff Pace testified to the signed statement they said Williams made voluntarily in their presence under questioning by Robey.

William's statement, read into the record after a defense motion to reject had been overruled and an exception noted, related that he arrived in Fredericksburg on a freight train from Cincinnati about 2 a. m. Sunday, May 20, 1934.

Robs Boy.

After he "hung around town" during the morning and afternoon, the witnesses said he told them, he entered the park about 5 p. m. and "lay around" until about 9 p. m. He then approached a parked car containing a boy and a girl and ordered them to get out and "march up the hill."

Williams was quoted by the witnesses as saying he intended to attack the girl but the boy pleaded with him, and after he considered the girl's youth, he changed his mind and took about $1.90 from the boy.

He then approached a second car, he was quoted as saying, ordered the couple there to get out and go some distance from the car. He struck the boy, he said, with an iron pipe he had picked up at a railroad yard. He then tried to attack the girl, the alleged confession continued, but she screamed and he struck her on the head.

Camden, N. J., June 24 (AP).—One man was stabbed and two others were injured by missles during a mass picketing demonstration late today outside the Victor division plant of the RCA Manufacturing Co., where a strike is in progress.

As workers left the plant six men and a woman were arrested, bringing the total arrests for the day to 31. Police estimated the crowd outside the plant at 5,000 persons. Howard Harrity, an employe of the plant, was stabbed as he left the mill. The strikers are seeking a 20 per cent pay increase and a closed shop.

Roosevelt Signs 18 Bills, Labors On Parley Talk

Work on Legislation Is Slowing Acceptance Speech Progress.

By the Associated Press.

After conferring with Vice President Garner and other Administration officials, President Roosevelt worked long and hard yesterday in writing the speech he will make in Philadelphia Saturday night accepting renomination.

Despite these arduous efforts, the White House reported the President was not "making much progress."

"Too many bills to study," was given as the reason.

Early in the day, Mr. Roosevelt signed 18 measures and vetoed another—a bill which would have provided Federal pensions for members of the Officers Reserve Corps and the Enlisted Reserves.

This action reduced the number of bills still to be considered to approximately 150, most important of which are the ship subsidy bill and the Walsh-Healy measure imposing wage and hour conditions on Government contractors.

On leaving the Executive Office after a half-hour's conference, Garner said he had "just been roaming around with nothing to do," so thought it might be a "good idea to drop by the White House."

He laughingly insisted that he and the President "never talked politics—that's one rule we have."

Shortly after the Vice President's departure, Resettlement Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell arrived announcing he had ordered his department to grant loans to cotton and corn farmers in the drought-stricken area of South Carolina and Georgia.

Another visitor, Gov. Brann, of Maine, predicted the country would go Democratic in November, basing his statement on the prophecy "that Maine's going Democratic, of course."

D. C. Woman Hurt In Auto Collision

Mrs. Dorothy Dietrick, 28, of 1427 Longfellow street northwest, was injured critically late last night when the automobile she was driving collided with another car on Defense highway, at Collington, near Bowie, Md.

She suffered chest injuries, possible concussion of the brain and cuts and bruises.

George Wannall, 14, of 1409 Manchester lane northwest, a passenger in her car, was treated for cuts and bruises.

Occupying the other automobile, Mrs. G. C. Robinson, 27, of Roanoke, Va., suffered a cut leg and lip. The driver, Crawford De Wees, of 1819 Riggs place northwest, was held by State police under $1,000 bond, pending outcome of Mrs. Dietrick's injuries.

The guest book was the same one used by Mrs. Berger's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Klee, when they observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary in 1914.

Air Liner Flies Here, Non-Stop, From Texas

24-Passenger Craft Covers 1,300 Miles in Less Than 8 Hours.

American Airlines' new 24-passenger Douglas flagship made a non-stop test flight yesterday from Fort Worth, Tex., to this city.

On board the giant transport plane when it arrived at Washington-Hoover Airport at 3 p. m., less than eight hours after its take-off at Fort Worth, 1,300 miles away, was Elliott Roosevelt, the President's son.

Roosevelt was to fly to Philadelphia to the Democratic National Convention, to which he has been elected a delegate. He said he would fly back to Texas today, as "we're expecting a new arrival in the family."

The latest in comfort and speed, the airplane is equipped with reclinable chairs for 24 passengers or lower and upper berths for 16 persons. Powered by twin Wright Cyclone engines, it is capable of cruising speeds of 180 miles an hour and maximum speeds well over 200 miles an hour.

Modeled after the DC-2, which won the Collier Trophy for 1935 for Donald W. Douglas, the new plane has a greater wing span and higher overfuselage.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

A counterpart of the Nobel Prize, a croix de guerre, or a D. S. O. will be awarded by employes of the Department of Agriculture to members of the department for outstanding work within the year in science or economics.

The plan to recognize unusual work among the employes is not generally known, even within the department, and the details have yet to be worked out, but the idea, as explained by one of the prime movers of it, is to give a medal to encourage the type of work that will make the department known throughout the country.

"There are no Government awards of merit given," said the man who is sponsoring the movement," and we have decided in the various employe organizations of the department that outstanding work ought to have public recognition."

The awarding committee will be known as the activities council and will be composed of representatives of all the employe groups—the unions, the welfare association, the athletic and recreational associations and others. The council will review the work of each division and department and decide which has the greatest scientific or economic value.

The council hopes to make its award of sufficient importance to merit attention from scientific societies and Government officials.

Keenan Takes New Post.

Frank J. Keenan, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, yesterday assumed new duties. From his former job as financial adviser to the division of drainage, levee and irrigation, he was advanced to chief of the division, succeeding Emil Schram who recently was appointed one of the six directors of the corporation by President Roosevelt.

Keenan's place was filled by Chauncey Y. Dodds, formerly the chief examiner of the division.

The division, Keenan said, operates under the emergency farm mortgage act. At the time of the organization of the division in 1933, Keenan came to Washington from Boise, Idaho, where he was commissioner of public investments for the State. There he handled the investment of a $13,000,000 endowment fund for the public schools and other State institutions.

Keenan was a heating engineer, a real estate operator and a farmer before going into State work. Because of his farm activities, which included the management of his 240-acre farm, he became active in the State Grange and then graduated into the State job.

Merit System Plank Seen.

News from the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, says the American Federation of Government Employes, indicates that the mission in behalf of the merit system is being favorably received and that a strong platform plank will be the result.

Before going to the convention city to present the plank of the party leaders, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, consulted Mrs. Bernice B. Heffner, national secretary and acting president of the A. F. G. E. regarding representation of Government workers' interests.

The A. F. G. E. also reports that it sees its membership goal within sight. The goal was 40,000 members before the opening of the national convention in Detroit on September 14. A little more than 5,000 new people have yet to be gathered, but in the last two weeks 1,090 have been added to the lists, the official report shows WPA Lodge, 139, recently reported 100 new members.

Scientists Granted Aid.

Two Government scientists recently were awarded grants-in-aid by the National Research Council. These awards were comparatively small sums of money which are given "to individuals of various scientific institutions to augment the funds provided for their work," according to Dr. Albert L. Barrows, executive secretary of the council. Fifty-five such awards were granted this year, and the Government workers who secured them are Mrs. Eleanora B. Knopf, of the Geological Survey, for her work in internal evidence of the mechanism of plastic deformation of marble, and J. F. Gates Clarke, of the National Museum, for his research in generic revision of the moth family oecophoridae.

John J. Culiton, formerly first vice president of the District of Columbia Division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America and an auditor in the postal savings division of the Postoffice Department, is having a double celebration today. It is his thirty-sixth birthday and he is going to Philadelphia to attend the Democratic convention. And Philadelphia, by the way, is his home town. Cullliton was for three years administrative assistant under the NRA before he took steps to be listed under civil service regulations.

Lieut. Comdr. Ben S. Gantz, United States Navy, Bureau of Ordnance, has taken over the duties of Frank S. Ray, the chief administrative officer, who retires formally on July 1. Actually, Ray left the bureau last month to use up his accrued leave. Although under retirement age, Ray terminated his 28 years of service with the bureau because of ill health. He was a familiar figure in the Senate, where he attended the hearings on the naval appropriations bills for years.

At the last one he was complimented for his thorough knowledge of his bureau by Glover H. Cary, chairman of the sub-committee on the Navy Department, and by his chief, Admiral Harold R. Stark, who declared his services at the hearings over a period of 20 years had been "invaluable."

Fund Approved For Laboratory Near Bethesda

Treasury Head Allocates $1,363,000 for New Health Unit.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday approved the allocation of $1,363,000 for construction of a laboratory for the Public Health Service near Bethesda, Md.

The extensive laboratory, to be used in solving disease problems, will be located on the Luke I. Wilson estate, Rockville pike, on land donated by Wilson.

This project, when first discussed several months ago, brought strenuous protests from Montgomery County residents in the area, including Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, and other well known persons.

At that time a mass meeting was held, at which the residents asked the county commissioners and the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission to oppose the establishmentof the laboratory.

Subsequent to the mass meeting, both the board of commissioners and the planning commission went on record against the proposal.

In Secretary Morgenthau's announcement, it was said that work on the project would go forward at once. The allocation come out of the $80,000,000 emergency construction fund authorized under the first deficiency act of June 22.

Twenty Washington motorists were arrested in Bethesda, Md., last night on charges of illegal parking. They were all released after posting $3.50 each.

The arrests came when the motorists, who have been flocking to Bethesda to attend showings of the Louis-Schmeling fight at a theater there, parked machines near the intersection of Wisconsin and Montgomery avenues.

Theater officials sought to prevent further arrests by stationing small boys to warn drivers about to park illegally.

Mrs. Grace V. Higgs, 31, Rockville, Md., was granted a final decree of absolute divorce from Davis McKinley Higgs in the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., yesterday. According to the testimony the couple was married in November, 1919, at Hagerstown. Mrs. Higgs, who charged desertion, was awarded the custody of the four minor children.

O. W. Anderson, county agent for Montgomery County, is holding a series of meetings throughout the county to give farmers a final opportunity to make out work sheets under the soil conservation program. According to the regulations of the program, producers not having work sheets on file will not be eligible to make applications for payments when earned. Meetings scheduled follow: Rockville and Gaithersburg districts, today, 10 a. m., county agent's office, Rockville; Olney district, today, 2 p. m., Brookeville Hall; Colesville and Wheaton districts, today, 8 p. m., Colesville schoolhouse; Barnesville, tomorrow, 10 a. m., Barnesville Community Hall; Poolesville district, tomorrow, 1 p. m., Elgin's drug store; Laytonsville district, Saturday, 10 a. m., Laytonsville School.

Culbertson On Bridge

The Lowly Deuce.

The unversal feeling among bridge players about low cards seems to be that they are dirty little weeds in an otherwise lovely garden. Not being strong on horticulture, I am not prepared to discuss weeds with authority, but I wouldn't be at all surprised to learn that they serve a useful purpose. I know that low cards often are lifesavers at the bridge table, fulfilling a multiplicity of duties.

Some of the fineest plays I have seen depended entirely on the presence of a deuce or three in the hand. The mere fact that most players hold these cards in cold contempt does not detract from their intrinsic worth. What could East have done in today's hand without a certain deuce?

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

West made the orthodox opening of his fourth highest heart; East's queen was allowed to hold, and declarer won the heart return with the ace. The jack of diamonds next was led and finessed, East properly holding up his king.

Another diamond was led to dummy's queen and, this time, East won, returning his last heart. Declarer won and decided to sound out the club situation. He led the ace, king and queen, and had East played automatically to these three cards his goose would have been cooked! He would have been caught flat-footed with a fourth-round club winner Declarer would have put him on lead with a club and he could not possibly have exited from his hand without giving dummy, with its three winning diamonds, the lead. Foreseeing this danger, East deliberately jettisoned his club stopper by following with high clubs instead of the deuce! By so doing he established declarer's fourth and fifth clubs, but that was inconsequential, inasmuch as the total number of tricks that declarer could win thus were limited to eight. Because there was nothing else to do, declarer cashed his clubs and then led up to dummy's spade king. He was not greatly surprised (considering East's club unblock) when West put up the jack and the king lost to the ace in East's hand. A spade return to West's queen clinched victory for the defenders.

Shevlin is the son of the famous Yale football player of that name.

Mrs. McAdoo, who is from Pasadena, Calif., married the youngest son of Senator William G. McAdoo. Her father, Robert Rowan, died some years ago. Her mother later married the Roman prince and now lives in Italy.

Mrs. McAdoo was married to Robert H. McAdoo on Christmas Day, 1923, in California.

Pope Pius Decries 'Evil Customs' Gain

Vatican City, June 24 (AP).—Pope Pius told members of his hierarchy today that "evil customs are increasing frightfully."

"Often," he said, they come "in the guise of art, amusement and modernity."

They insinuate, he added, "dangerous germs into the people which attack the sobriety of customs, the observance of divine and human laws, the sanctity and fecundity of the family and the innocence of youth."

Speaking to the 17 cardinals and 250 bishops who gathered to congratulate him on his recent birthday, His Holiness charged them to persevere in their labor for "perfection and diffusion of religious teachings and various initiatives for the education of the youth and the people."

The Maritime Commission.

The ship subsidy bill passed by Congress on the eve of adjournment provides for the creation of a bipartisan Maritime Commission of five persons, appointed by the President with "due regard to their special fitness for the efficient discharge of the duties imposed upon them."

This emphasis upon fitness is well placed, for successful administration of the new shipping measure calls for a high order of ability and personal disinterestedness on the part of those in authority. The commission will exercise all the powers and duties of the old Shipping Board now vested in the Department of Commerce by an executive order of 1933. It will also be entrusted with the development of a comprehensive system of direct subsidies for the construction and operation of vessels flying the American flag.

If these important and diverse duties are to be well done, the men at the head of the new organization and their subordinates must be selected on the basis of merit. If the newly created offices, carrying attractive salaries, are treated as gifts to be bestowed upon friends or as rewards for past services—in short, if the spoils system is permitted to invade a field where it is certain to work havoc—the benefits expected from the new measure will assuredly prove illusory.

The Department of Commerce appears to have failed conspicuously to meet the challenge presented by a demoralized merchant marine. The cause may be either admittedly insufficient funds or inefficient administration due to political favoritism, or a combination of both. In any event, repeated disasters at sea, due to inadequate safety devices, and mutinous demonstrations by striking seamen have brought about a serious situation which calls for prompt and decisive Federal intervention.

The new Maritime Commission will have its hands more than full, trying to improve present conditions, while laying the foundation for a bigger and better merchant marine of the future. The degree of its success will depend upon the character and the ability of the men who are entrusted with the task of development and maintenance.

At Chapel Hill.

Another sign of the ferment stirring the South today is the Institute of Regional Development now holding its first session at the University of North Carolina.

Experts in the sociology of the South comprise the assembly, and their purpose is to consider ways and mean of raising the status of their section of the country. Though differing slightly perhaps in the predominance of academicians in its membership, the institute resembles earlier efforts toward regional co-operation in New England and the Pacific Northwest. Comparison may also be made with the Institute of Public Affairs conducted during the summer at the University of Virginia, insofar as the latter gives its attention to problems near at hand.

The Chapel Hill institute is headed by Dr. Howard W. Odum, whose reputation as a social scientist is well established. Believing that the South is at a crossroads, he urges co-ordinated planning to insure for the region "a reintegrated agrarian culture" to be geared with industry.

"For the Southeast," he and his colleagues assert, "to import corn from Mexico, rutabagas and paper pulp from Canada and meats from South America reflects the nth degree of unplanned economy which results in incredible every-day scarcity of what could abound without limit."

Some debate has developed on the question of whether the new institute should confine itself to research after the fashion of the Brookings Institution or attempt to obtain immediate action. Proponents of the second course point to rural electrification and soil erosion control as undertakings that should be indorsed and actively promoted. To satisfy both points of view, however, a committee has been named to return a plan for the co-ordination of research and advisory agencies in the South. Without a doubt this will lead the institute to the doors of the various State planning commissions of the region. Unfortunately these have been operating thus far with only middling success, except in Florida, Tennessee and Virginia. If the institute can stir the rest of the South into livelier action, its efforts will not have been vain. And whatever the outcome, the institute has already justified itself simply as rebuke to those who are maintaining that because the States have done little to help themselves they can do little and, in consequence, that the Federal Government has no choice but to take over the complete responsibility for their rehabilitation.

Another American Tragedy.

Kittens, razor blades and bad pennies have two things in common—they're hard to get rid of and even harder to stay rid of. Drowning, dropping down slots and palming off on one's neighbors are three of the most tried and trusted methods for disposing of the nuisances. But none of these is foolproof and man is still wondering why, in the name of modern invention, nothing has yet been devised to take care of such exigencies.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugenio Russo, of Providence, R. I., have a fourth bother to be added to the troublesome triumvirate—a baby buggy. Feeling that a perambulator had reached the place where it was neither useful nor aesthetic, the Russos decided to discard it. They hated to offer it to a neighbor because of its dilapidated condition and its size precluded dropping it down a slot in the bathroom. That left only the third outlet—drowning. So, releasing the brakes, they gave it a shove in the direction of a nearby pond.

Alas, like the cats, blades and pennies it was returned to its owners. The fire department, after being notified that a man had pushed a baby and cart into the water, dredged the pond, rescued the cart, and it is once more a problem in the Russo household. Dreiser wrote his "American Tragedy" about a successful drowning. It remains for the Russos to write a tome on the tragedy of an unsuccessful drowning.

Dodging The Real Issue.

The defensive note appearing in the keynote speech of Senator Barkley was more strongly emphasized at Philadelphia last night when Senator Robinson addressed the delegates in his capacity of permanent chairman of the Democratic National Convention.

A tone which in places verged upon the apologetic was natural in view of the fact that the majority leader was assigned the arduous task of upholding the Administration's relief and fiscal policies. But making all proper discounts for this, it remains significant that the Democratic spokesmen should be so clearly affected with qualms of conscience at this early stage of the campaign. An unusual amount of effort is being spent in covering up what are evidently regarded as weak spots in the Administration's armor. It may be hazarded that future analysts, with a perspective difficult to obtain at the ringside, will attribute this to the absence of any acknowledged philosophy of government in the present Democratic Party. This is not entirely due to the fact that admirable humanitarian yearnings do not and cannot of themselves constitute the basis of a stable political organization.

There is another reason for the muddy thinking which no amount of excellent showmanship and knowledge of mob psychology on Mr. Farley's part can clarify. That reason is the unwillingness of the Democratic leaders openly to espouse the collectivism toward which they are steering. Public admission that this is the haven sought would be too likely to alienate many party followers who even now are none too happy about the general trend. So the "build-up" for the man proceeds, leaving it for the future to disclose the policy.

So far the succession of speeches at Philadelphia has made no real attempt to explain the principles, if any, which the new Democratic Party plans to follow. Instead the orators fall back on eulogies of President Roosevelt as the peerless leader. "Opponents sometimes denounce President Roosevelt as a dictator," said Senator Robinson last night. "No President has demonstrated a kindlier or more generous spirit than President Roosevelt. He has maintained amicable relations with every department of the Government."

That sort of banality is simply dodging the real issue of the campaign, in a way which not even the necessity of stirring up convention enthusiasm will justify. The issue is not the kindly nature of President Roosevelt. It is not his great service in restoring a large degree of national confidence, undenied by any except bitter partisans. The changes have been rung on the admirable personal qualities and emergency accomplishments of the President. But little or nothing is being said which gives any definite idea of what his policies would be during the next four critical years, if re-elected.

As a sincere patriot holding the office he does, Mr. Roosevelt would presumably be the last American to wish that his fellow countryman should so idolize any individual, and so subordinate the critical faculty essential to good government, as to accept him for another term merely because of the degree of recovery achieved at a strain upon the national credit which, as even Senator Robinson admitted last night, "has been great." Yet the dubious service which the Philadelphia convention is doing the President is to spread the belief that if only he can be kept in office, no defined policy will be necessary. And Senator Robinson last night carried this argument so far as to suggest that Gov. Landon's disposition to state his objectives frankly, on becoming a leading candidate for nomination, was somehow highly undesirable.

Senator Robinson's defense of the relief fiasco was pitiably shallow. To admit, as the best that can be said, that only three-quarters of the money poured out by the CWA "was of substantial and permanent advantage" is as unimpressive as to point with pride to the fact that "some" of the public works undertakings consist "of permanent structures." But neither this, nor his questionable explanation of why the United States adopted a managed currency nor his amazing denunciation of Mr. Hoover for granting a moratorium to war debtors to save Europe from collapse, was the main shortcoming of this speech.

Its really alarming deficiency lies in the underlying assumption that the personality of a "fuehrer," regardless of what course he may decide to follow, is of itself entirely adequate reason for continuing "our leader" in the position of Chief Executive of the United States.

Blum Proposes A Way Out.

The Blum government's declaration on foreign policy, though representing no fundamental departure from the basic French position regarding the organization of peace in Europe, is nevertheless no doctrinaire pronouncement. On the contrary, it is an effective blend of idealism and realism.

For years French Socialists have been bitterly critical of the course pursued by their nation in international affairs. They regularly voted against all defense budgets. They insisted that disarmament was a practical ideal. They were fervent in their belief in the League of Nations. Repeatedly they urged that the hand of friendship be held out to Germany.

As premier, M. Blum makes no apology for the stand he and his party took while in the opposition. What they believed in then, he insists, they still believe in now. They favor all possible measures that would result in the control, limitation and reduction of armaments. They want the League made into a truly effective instrument of peace. They would like nothing better than a Franco-German entente. Indeed, they still cling to the high hope that some day the late Aristide Briand's dream of a United States of Europe will be brought to fulfillment. But the government's declaration shows that M. Blum and his colleagues are not prepared to ignore the depressing realities of the present international situation.

Before there can be disarmament, the Popular Front government insists, as have so many other French governments before it, there must be security. And the only effective way of achieving security is through collective action under the aegis of a powerful League of Nations.

But the lesson of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute and the League's failure to solve it has not been lost on them. The Blum government wants no tampering with the Covenant which, it believes, is adequate for the task in hand. But it is convinced that real enforcement, which means the application of military pressure against an aggressor, must be left to regional groups consisting of nations that are linked by geography or otherwise have a community of interests. The other League members would only be required to apply financial and economic sanctions against the treaty-breaking state, as they have been doing against Italy.

It is obvious that this proposal is a bid for British support. In Great Britain the feeling has been growing that only through regional compacts can peace be maintained. The demand has arisen there that the League Covenant should be watered down. The Blum government would fit such regional agreements into the general framework of the Covenant as it stands today and in that way strengthen rather than weaken the League.

From a practical point of view there is much to recommend this plan. It is obvious that nations whose interests are not directly involved in an international dispute are loath to apply physical pressure to aggressor states. It is equally plain that a scrapping of the League would mean a return to the naked power politics of the past with all its attendant evils.

Yet the outlook for such regional agreements as that which Premier Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos have in mind can hardly be said to be rosy. The Eastern Locarno pact which the late M. Barthou proposed, the Danubian agreement sponsored by the Stresa conference, the five-power air pact which has been discussed off and on for some years—nothing has come of any of them. Whether life can now be blown into these or similar proposals remains to be seen.

"It will soon be possible to go to the moon in a rocket ship," says an inventor, "but it would be impossible to return to earth." Tell us more.

"If European diplomats will act sensibly a general outbreak of war over there will be averted," declares a Washington official. When does the shooting start?

Personality In Tennis.

Helen Wills Moody in Scribner's Magazine.

Looking back upon the players whom I have met upon the court, I am impressed with the great diversity of personality. No two players are alike, nor does their common interest in tennis necessarily tend to make them similar. Each has his special interests, friends, ideas, likes and dislikes. This does not mean that tennis players are not often friendly. I feel that I am fortunate in having tennis-playing friends in almost every country of the world. But what I mean is, the game of tennis does not establish a uniformity among its competitors. In fact, it does quite the opposite. It encourages the player to express himself and his personality. He takes his racquet in hand, serves, makes strokes, conforms to the rules, yet into his game he puts something of his individuality so that the play becomes a unique expression of his own. Tilden, Mrs. Mallory, Suzanne Lenglen, Borotra, each had a striking personality, and each expressed it in tennis.

Hope They Don't Remember Me Again.

'Today Religion Is Free.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
We wish to compliment you on your editorial in The Post of June 19 on the Ludke family. You took a courageous stand on the subject. Your ideas and views were so sane and logical that there could be no disputing them and they were so nicely put together that it was a pleasure to read it.

There are very few men who would have had the courage to have expressed the truth which was so contrary to the general opinion that is prevalent in regard to the Ludke family. The Ludke children have fulfilled the Biblical scripture that a "little child shall lead them." The firm stand that they have taken has a parallel case in the Bible in the third chapter of the Book of Daniel, in which Nebuchadnezzar sentenced Shadrack, Meshack and Abednego, the three faithful ones of the Lord who were the only ones to refuse to stand to the flute, harp and cornet and to bow before the golden image.

Ballston, Va., June 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I am writing you concerning your recent editorial labeled "Today Religion Is Free," anent the Ludke case in Prince Georges County, wherein several children refused to accede to a simple request by the school authorities to salute the American flag during some routine school exercises.

For three years I have read your editorials without failing an issue, and it has been my contention that The Post has had consistently the best editorial page in the country, a contention recently borne out by the Pulitzer award. And so, in my very inadequate opinion, I am sorry to think that for the first time in those many years you have written yourself a lemon.

ARLEY RAY UNGER,
Editor, Prince Georges Post.
College Park, Md., June 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
To honor the Stars and Stripes, recognizing the liberty for which they stand, is the privilege of all Americans. This honor is gladly rendered.

To burn incense to the flag, to make a fetish, a semi-god—this is not patriotism; it is superstition. When the flag is made a thing to be worshipped, it becomes a mere material thing.

Americans will stand stanchly in defense of that which the flag represents; they will not make the symbol a thing to be idolized.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I want to compliment you on your editorial of June 19 entitled "Today Religion Is Free."

It must be comforting to those big brave patriots of the American Legion to know that they have succeeded in compelling these little children to salute the flag or leave school. More "bonus" to them.

Mr. Zioncheck's 'Rights.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Representative Zioncheck states he is being railroaded by Government officials behind the bars of an insane asylum to prevent possible prosecution for false detention. It has happened before, it can happen again.

I am not interested in the personality of the case but I am vitally interested in the principle of "personal right" per the Constitution involved therein.

As a citizen of the U. S. A., I am calling your attention to this situation. THOMAS E. M. GRATH.

To End Turmoil.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In your issue of June 23, the letter —"Religion's Destination" — deserves the recognition and thanks of all right-thinking people. It is so true, and, were it put into practice by nations as well as individuals, the turmoil of today throughout the world could not exist.

My sincere thanks, Mr. Michael Walpin. SADIE GROSNER.

Overpaid Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Is there no way to compel substitution of a decent Federal department beneficial insurance?

For instance: The Interior beneficial insurances charges payee $1 every month and no receipt is ever given, unless a stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies the money! The "benefit" is only $250. I began paying over 30 years ago. I have been on the retired pension list for 15 years and am still paying the Department of the Interior Beneficial Association $12 a year for that $250 sum due on death!

A decent adjudication of this unsavory Department of Interior matter would be to refund to each paying member every dollar paid in by that member over and above $250 insurance benefit and surrender to each paid up and over the full amount with interest of every dollar over the $250 benefit with a paid-up policy! The haggling out of a pensionnaire's little money these surpluses are a criminal extortion!

A 20 years' membership cancels in full the $250 except for $10 over. I am still paying that $12 per annum after 30 years membership!

The 'Five Walkers.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The five walkers from Wall Street have no influence south of the Mason and Dixon line and I doubt if they will do more than cause a ripple in the Roosevelt vote in November.

In Virginia all influential Democrats from the veteran Senator Carter Glass on down the line will pull for Roosevelt and Garner.

Lemke and O'Brien on a Union Party ticket will receive few votes south of the Mason and Dixon line. Their votes will come from States normally voting Republican, and will likely take votes from Landon and Knox in States where they will need votes most.

Former Gov. Smith and Ely were both on the sidelines in 1932 and did put a crimp in the Roosevelt vote. Former United States Senator Reed and Bainbridge Colby have been out of the political picture for years and the young generation of voters has little interest in their stand on the New Deal program. The fifth walker from Wall Street, Daniel F. Cohalan, is so little known that to consider his influence outside of his voting precinct is a waste of time.

Therefore, the "Five Walkers of Wall Street" will really put fight in the Democratic Party, where there was a possibility of being too confident of having the election in the sack. It has the effect of consolidating the New Deal fighting forces.

Revised Slogan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
"On with the New Deal or bust" is the keynote of the hue and cry now being staged at the mob scene under way in Philadelphia.

The sequel to fulfillment of their aims might safely be written in advance, under the hand and seal of the national treasurer, as follows:

Radio Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Is there anything you can do to help stop the nuisance of radios that go night and day?

Station Needs Cleaning.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I should like to call to your attention a matter which I think should be attended to. The Government of the United States has spent large sums of money to beautify the Capitol plaza.

Looking from Union Station south it is a beautiful sight. Looking toward the station we see a terminal which hasn't been cleaned for a long time to my knowledge. Upon close inspection we find the building dirty from the grime of a long time. If a sand blast or acid treatment were given it, it would be in keeping with the rest of the buildings around it.

I am interested due to the fact I am a native Washingtonian and want visitors to our city to carry away a good impression of it. They won't notice the grime so much in leaving for their Washington stay, but coming back to go home that would be their last impression upon leaving the station. I hope I have made myself clear.

The Word 'Darky.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In The Post of June 22, 1936, one of your sports writers used the term "darky" in referring to Joe Louis.

The word "darky" however used is objectionable, but when it is used in a news organ which has wide circulation and which helps mould public opinion as all news organs do, it then becomes most reprehensible.

This is not the first time in recent weeks that this word has slipped into your columns and it is hoped that this is not a new policy which is being adopted.

This word is not a term of endearment nor does it denote a peculiar understanding of the Negro on the part of the user — and it is not funny. On the other hand it is one of the many traditions of the South which are gradually filtering into the more enlightened areas. The Nation's Capital can stand no more than it already has admitted—and it has more than its share.

Sports pages should set the pace, for it is in sports that the better emotions should be aroused. Fair play loses its significance if only glibly mouthed.

Mary And Her Lamb.

Another international episode threatens to develop as the result of the emergence of a venerable Welshman to claim that he is the only surviving schoolfellow of Mary Hughes, the Mary who had a little school-going lamb. His name is Charles Roberts, and on the occasion of the celebration of his ninety-fourth birthday he recalled the famous day when the lamb followed Mary to school and gamboled among the pupils desks, thereby violating classroom rules.

This is a disconcerting claim, for a few years ago Henry Ford restored an old village school of Sudbury, Mass., where, he was assured, the lamb had attended with its young mistress. One Mary Elizabeth Sawyer was named as the Mary of the poem. John Roulstone was cited as the author of the first 12 lines, and Sarah Josepha Hale was credited with having completed the poem in its present form. A claim likewise has been made in Germany that the poem had its origin there.

It would seem to be a delicate situation involving the rights of sensitive peoples. Fortunately, Russia will not be involved, as that country abolished Mother Goose and others of her ilk, presumably on the grounds that they were capitalist creations. There should be a tribunal to settle all such international disputes. An investigation might show that going to school was a habit of frisky lambs the world over, about 100 years ago. It might well be that many countries had a Mary and a lamb. At any rate, this is a time for restraint on the part of the hotheads.

Riding To Banbury

THE white horse the lady rode to Banbury Cross was a hobby horse. That is the reason she had rings on her fingers and bells on her toes. And if you don't think that's a good reason you never owned a hobby.

The lady rides to Banbury daily. She is a lovely lady with starry eyes and a faraway look in them. And she never rides alone. All the hobby riders in the world are at her heels. They are the lads who think; the lads who work; the lads who play; the lads who experiment; the lads who make things (everything except money); the lads who seek things; the lads who collect things; and away at the end of the procession, the lads who go to see things and the lads who merely talk about things; all hobbies of a sort.

And when we reach Banbury Cross (yes, sir; both of us; why not?) we know at once we are in heaven; for it has long been known that heaven has ideal pasturage for hobby horses.

One good place to find a hobby is in the dictionary; and we'll pick the definition we like best: "A favorite and ever-recurring theme or discourse, thought or effort." It may be a whimsy or a life-work, vocation or avocation, obsession or relaxation.

• • • •

All hobbies are useful. They take man out of himself, as with books, plays and movies. They give him an outlet for his emotions, as with sports, either as spectator or participant. They relieve a humdrum existence.

And let us pause a moment to look at the humdrum existence. It's what we rail at but would be lonesome without. There are thousands of men who complain of their jobs who couldn't be hired to do anything else. There's nothing else they want to do. And they talk shop. Talking shop is a hobby. And even that hobby has good results, for when men talk shop they sometimes get new ideas.

I know a man who prides himself on his skill with a grubbing hoe. He says he has done more grubbing than any other man in the world and that there is a right way and a wrong way to grub. He admits that it is a back-breaking job but he enjoys it, and he has his relaxation. Once a week he goes to a bowling alley and tires himself out bowling, having the time of his life. Bowling is his hobby.

When it comes to experiments, a boy's hobby very frequently becomes a man's life work, and the world as a result receives a gift. The pursuit of a hobby is always a treasure hunt and once in a while the treasure is found. Most of the world's modern wonders are due directly or indirectly to hobbies.

But let's not be too serious. Some men pride themselves on the mixing of cocktails or the making of salads. Either may be a worthwhile hobby while one is striving for perfection; but when the hobby-rider is satisfied that perfection has been reached, that the cocktail or the salad cannot be improved upon, the making of either is no longer a hobby, it is a vanity. That man is merely striving for the applause of his fellows, and that is one thing a man with a real hobby cheerfully ignores.

There is nothing wrong in striving for the applause of one's fellows. It is a man's greatest incentive to endeavor. It is back of desire for money, for power, for fame. But in itself it is a vanity, and the great virtue of a hobby, the right kind of hobby, is that it can make us forget this vanity.

• • • •

Not the least important of hobbies is that of the collector. The collector of bugs, butterflies, fossils and museum pieces may conceivably increase human knowledge. The collector of stamps or pictures or books may increase his own knowledge of geography, history, literature or art. If it doesn't do this much it isn't really a hobby at all but merely Acquisitiveness Putting on Airs. And at its worst it serves a very real purpose. It puts money in circulation which enables other hobby riders to buy gadgets.

Gadgets, while not in themselves the most important things in life, are, at the moment probably the most important factors in the economic problems that face the world today.

Once on a time men had to labor to produce necessities; food, clothing, shelter. In succeeding years of civilization the luxuries he turned into necessities kept him busy despite labor-saving devices. And because labor saving machinery increased more rapidly than his urgent wants, and because he had never learned to live with leisure, nor how to apportion it, he had perforce to turn to gadgets.

Gadets are the doo-dads that put extra feathers in the home nest and ice cubes in the cocktails; they give the movies a new dimension and invest last year's car with obsolescence; they enable us to get our oratory and our beer in cans and prove that men and women are never too old for toys. Gadgets are of the people, by the people and for the people. No government ever made one in the history of the world; but gadgets enough on a busy market will enable any government to balance its budget.

And every gadget was born of a hobby.

And that's why we're looking hopefully toward the Lady at Banbury Cross. With the proper encouragement, and with rings on her fingers and bells on her toes, we shall have music wherever she goes.

Forgotten Tribute

Philadelphia.

The opening session of the political, emotional and alcoholic debauch of the Democratic job-holders suited the highest traditions of party politics. The Forgotten Man was never further from the thoughts of his rulers than in the 90 minutes of preliminary horseplay which warmed up the delegates for the hilarity yet to come. Many of the patriots were suffering from hangover, the penalty of their free-style exuberance of the night before.

This batting practice had continued long past midnight and, fitfully, until dawn, when the waiters opened the windows and aired the last drooling postmasters, assistant prosecutors and deputy commissioners out of the premises to admit the sweepers.

The bands were out again early in the morning and the great, iron voice of the mechanical speaker began to bray once more through horns mounted in front of headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford. By 10 o'clock the petty politicians were emerging from their quarters and crowding the breakfast rooms, except, of course, those shuddering souls who tottered to the bars to steady themselves for the duties of citizenship. About 11 a band went blatting up Broad street, leading the Pennsylvania delegation to the first solemn rites, consisting of a prayer, two speeches, a short-weight tribute to Will Rogers and a 37-minute exhibition of determined exultation. At 1 o'clock Jim Farley called the meeting to order with three stout whacks of his mallet and the mockery was on.

The galleries, however, were not yet filled and they never did fill, for the general excitement in the lobbies and the streets and in the local papers had given the citizens to believe that the spectacle was not for them. They had overbally-hooed the show, and Mr. Farley, as he stood there on the scaffold counting his house, experienced the pangs which come to every promoter when the customers are eager and willing but frightened off. Mr. Farley wore a black suit of the kind which politicians wear to the funerals of minor leaders, a stiff collar and a dark tie. His nude scalp gleamed in the light of the great lamps which beat down from the upper tier and he held up a hand from time to time to shield his eyes from the blinding glare.

The job-holders assorted themselves into their respective gangs under his firm but gentle urging and he introduced the Right Rev. Hugh L. Lamb, auxiliary Catholic bishop of Philadelphia, who asked a blessing on the deliberations. The deliberations of the convention already had been conducted in Washington and the impending exercises were to consist merely of frivolity and farce. The patriots themselves thoroughly understood this but they did not disown the implied compliment to their importance.

Now, before proceeding to "The Star-Spangled Banner," which normally follows the prayer, Mr. Farley touched the sentiment of the meeting with an appeal for one minute's silent tribute to Mr. Rogers. The people rose and stood in stillness, remembering the comedian who used to make them laugh at themselves, but somewhere the timing failed and the gavel fell again after 30 seconds. It was a posthumous amend to Mr. Rogers, for the party regarded him with a certain degree of skepticism four years ago and adopted as the official court jester one Eddie Dowling, whose humor was more to the personal liking of Mr. Roosevelt.

They doubted the party regularity of Mr. Rogers' humor, for he had slept in the White House in Coolidge's Administration and had been, at best, nonpartisan in some of his orations. But Mr. Dowling never quite measured up and Rogers was slowly winning back his influence with the Democratic Party under the New Deal when he lost his life. Mr. Dowling was present again today and may try once more to win the official cap and bells, but he will have to get very hot to stand out above his audience.

Mr. Farley, himself, followed after reading from a text by Charlie Michelson, the ghost of the Democratic Party, who sat about 3 yards behind him, following copy lest Mr. Farley stumble in his lesson. It was a truculent writing, needling the unhappy Republicans for being Republicans and laying the scourge in last biting lick across the bloody back of Herbert Hoover. Why, Mr. Michelson demanded to know, hadn't they had the candor and consistency to select him again in Cleveland? And Mr. Farley delivered this withering challenge with cruel scorn.

He touched the office-holders off with a closing reference to Mr. Roosevelt and turned away to visit with Senator Joe Robinson as they struggled around and around, singing for their supper in a half-hour's performance of spontaneous toil. It is tough on the feet and vocal cords, this howling and braying which constitutes the routine spontaneous tribute, but these things happen only once in four years and the time between is easy and the pay attractive.

Perhaps it is a little unfair to mention the Forgotten Man in such festive circumstances. After all, every political party has figures of speech, and the Forgotten Man is no different from the sacred heritage, the heroes of Valley Forge and the Founding Fathers in that respect. But he is also a human being and a rather pathetic creature, according to Mr. Roosevelt's description.

Did Sanctions Fail?

Observer Argues That League's Collective Effort To Restraint Mussolini Worked So Well That They Had To Be Dropped.

By Barnet Nover.

WHY HAS the British government come to the conclusion that the financial and economic sanctions imposed on Italy must be dropped? Is it, as is generally believed, because they failed? Or is it actually for the unadmitted but potent reason that they were on the way to succeeding only too well?

Common sense cries out against such a Chestertonian paradox. Certainly the ponderable facts regarding developments in East Africa in the period since sanctions were voted by the League of Nations appear to give the lie to any such conclusion. Eight months ago when 50 nations agreed to take punitive action against Italy, Haile Selassie was still on the throne of Ethiopia and the invading Italian armies had only just begun their drive towards Addis Ababa. Now, despite sanctions, all organized Ethiopian resistance to Italy has ended; the Negus Negusti is in exile and Ethiopia is Italian.

If, therefore, the purpose which sanctions were intended to serve was simply to prevent Ethiopia from being overrun then, obviously, sanctions failed and the continuation of sanctions could not restore the vanished throne of Haile Selassie. That was the argument advanced by a great many British Conservatives. Ultimately it became the official view of the Baldwin government.

False Reasoning In Common Argument.

BUT THIS argument, somehow, does not make sense. It is based on the curious premise that the application of the League Covenant to the Italo-Ethiopian situation was justifiable only so long as Ethiopia was in a position to resist Italian aggression; that League action must necessarily cease when the victim of that aggression has been swallowed up. If such reasoning serves as a precedent for the future it will mean that only those nations which are in a position to defend themselves and which, therefore, do not need the League will be aided by the League. Muddle-headed thinking can go no further.

Yet despite their obvious confusion and uncertainty it must be taken for granted that Messrs. Baldwin and Eden know what they are about. Possibly they let the real cat out of the bag when, in informing the House of Commons that the government proposed to abolish sanctions against Italy, they declared that the continuation of such punitive measures might lead to war.

This can mean only one of two things. It can mean that Italy, while not really hurt by sanctions, is increasingly irritated by them, so much so that at some time in the future, in a moment of pique, Mussolini might launch his battalions against his annoyers. Or it must mean that Italy has already felt the pinch of sanctions to such an extent that their continuation would, by bringing about a collapse of Italian finances and the Italian economic situation, make worthless its military conquest of Ethiopia.

Sanctions Have Worked On Italy's Home Economy.

IF THE FIRST theory is correct it presupposes that Mussolini, who refused to take Italy out of the League despite the vote of censure of Italy's conduct passed by the League and the sanctions imposed on that kingdom, will be goaded by pin-pricks into a war. In view of the fact that Great Britain's position in the Mediterranean is very much stronger now than it was last summer and fall, not least because it has the definite pledge of support of France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia in the event it is attacked by Italy, it suggests that Mussolini is slightly mad. This most certainly he is not.

Is it not fair to assume, therefore, that the threat of war arises out of the very circumstance that sanctions, while not in themselves sufficient to prevent Italy from conquering Ethiopia, have done such damage that if continued will bring the Italian financial and economic structure to the point of collapse?

On the basis of the statement issued by the Bank of Italy on March 31 and the replies to the questionnaire on gold imports from Italy sent to the League by its members, the London Economist estimates that between October to March the Bank of Italy lost half of its already depleted gold reserve. In that same period Italy's exports —including exports to nonsanctionist nations—were halved. The decline, it must be noted, was greater in the later months of this period than the earlier, showing that the noose was steadily being tightened.

To be sure, the Italians pointed out that the decline in exports was offset by a sharp reduction in imports, thus slowing up the drain of gold out of the kingdom. But in the long run the decline in imports meant the using up of available stocks of raw material that sooner or later would have to be replaced and which, were sanctions indefinitely continued, would have to be paid for to a large extent in gold.

A SIGNIFICANT question then arises. Was the Baldwin government, which took the lead in advocating sanctions, prepared to view with equanimity this wearing down of Italy's financial and economic structure?

Those in Great Britain who have been most ardent in their devotion to the League have argued that Italy must be punished until it cries quits. But this has never been the view of the London government itself.

The Baldwin regime took the lead at Geneva not out of any flaming conviction in the efficacy of sanctions, but because it was pushed into such a course of action by British public opinion.

Despite the steady growth of Anglo-Italian tension in the months that followed the London government never had any really punitive intent toward Italy. On the contrary, it continued to regard Italy, aggressor though it was in Africa, as a potential bulwark of peace in Europe and was not anxious to do anything that would lead to the Duce's overthrow.

Once it became impossible to solve the Italo-Ethiopian problem by mediation or diplomacy, Great Britain loyally carried out the measures voted by the League. Very likely the calculation was that sanctions would be slow and halting in their action and not before the beginning of the rainy season had made further military operations impossible, would Italy really feel the pinch. Then, its armies immobilized, its financial and economic structure under attack Italy, it was no doubt calculated, would agree to make a reasonable peace.

What, apparently, the Baldwin government did not take into account was, first, that Ethiopian resistance would so speedily collapse and, second, that sanctions would be carried out so loyally by so many League members as to be far more effective than anyone had anticipated.

Downing Street Placed In Awkward Position.

THUS GREAT BRITAIN, no less than the other great powers that are members of the League, has been faced by a real dilemma. To drop sanctions would mean to discredit a weapon whose edges have actually proved to be sharper than anyone expected they would be and at the same time to discredit the League. But to continue sanctions might mean the weakening and perhaps the collapse of Italy. In the face of the existing situation in Europe this is exactly what neither France nor Russia nor Great Britain desires.

France under Laval was so eager to avoid weakening Italy that it bluffed Sir Samuel Hoare into approving a peace plan directly at variance with the spirit and the letter of the Covenant. Russia, while a more ardent supporter of the League during the course of the Italo-Ethiopian war, cannot forget that the immediate problem facing it is to keep Germany somehow in check. And Great Britain more and more, in recent days, has also become convinced that it is Germany which is the greatest danger to peace.

To be sure the Baldwin government has been eager to reach some kind of a modus vivendi with the Third Reich and will probably continue those efforts. But all three powers regard Italy as a useful counterpoise, particularly in the Danube area, to Germany and realize that the more Italy is weakened the greater the likelihood of a German thrust to the south.

In its largest significance Great Britain's decision to lift sanctions constitutes a return to old-fashioned power politics, the re-establishment, potentially at least, of the Stresa front. Had the Baldwin government's belief in the League been more than a borrowed enthusiasm it might have taken the stand that all other considerations are secondary to permitting that organization to show its full strength by keeping sanctions going. But while it wants the League to remain, Germany has forced it into old patterns of action. It wants the best of the new world of collective action and of the old world of big-power groupings. But in the face of the German threat the old world looks far more attractive than the new.

French Seamen Win Demands After Disorders

Vacations With Pay and 40-Hour Week Agreed to by Companies.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 24.—Striking French sailors in the harbor of Marseille, who advertised their stand by floating red flags from the halyards, tonight won their demands.

The government announced ship owners accepted the seamen's demands and the latter would return to work tomorrow night.

Refusing to vacate the ships when they struck Monday, the sailors demanded a 40-hour week, vacations with pay—and bedsheets on bunks. Nearly 50 French boats were scenes of strikes and foreign vessels were unable to leave the harbor when tugboat crews joined the walkout.

Taxi Strike Averted.

Ambassadors of several foreign nations have asked authorities to commandeer tugs to enable visiting ships to get out to sea.

A threatened general taxi strike in Paris was averted when employers agreed to give chauffeurs a collective contract.

At St. Nazaire, officials said, 120 men "from Paris" occupied naval shipyards, camping a few hundred yards from the unfinished cruisers Georges Leygues and Marseillaise.

Street Fight Occurs.

A strike banner in the window of Dun & Bradstreet's branch office, which was occupied by striking employes for the fifteenth day, led to a street fight between rightist and leftists.

The workers took down the banner, which read "we want our salaries and bread," at the request of police, but continued to display the red flag alongside the tricolor.

Police detained several. The 100 Dun & Bradstreet strikers are seeking a 15 per cent salary increase and recognition of the union.

$400,000 Burglary Stirs Long Island

Coe told police he awoke this morning to find a prowler had stripped of his own and his wife's bedroom of jewelry and other valuables during the night. The loot, all insured, included a pearl necklace valued by Coe at $300,000.

Police said the burglary reminded them of the work of Arthur Barry and "Boston Billy" Monahan, notorious "gentlemen" burglars of a decade ago who now are serving long terms in prison.

District Attorney Martin W. Littleton and Police Inspector Harold R. King questioned 41 persons employed on the Coe estate, including nine house servants, without obtaining a tangible clew. They expressed a conviction it was not an "inside job."

Midwest Drought Near '34 Intensity

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—A June drought which burned into Middle West crop prospects with an intensity approaching that of 1934 added additional losses to its mounting millions of dollars today.

From the eastern slopes of the Rockies to the foothills of the Alleghanies the moisture deficiency continued. High temperatures and drying winds in parts of the Dakotas added their damage and Gov. Elmer Holt of Montana reported conditions were "growing worse hourly" in southeastern Montana.

"Only the fact that it has been cooler generally has given this month a better showing than June, 1934, said Nat C. Murray, widely known Chicago crop observer. "In many areas the precipitation has been less thna it was in the drought disaster of '34."

While private crop statisticians prepared upward revisions of recent estimates that more than 50,000,000 bushels of spring wheat in the Northwestern States had been burned away, the Weather Bureau offered little encouragement of a change for the better.

3 Arabs Die in Rioting, 23 Jailed in Palestine

Jerusalem, June 24 (Palcar Agency).—Three Arabs were killed in disorders last night, and a total of 23 Arabs was arrested for possession of arms, a government communique issue tonight stated.

Two Arabs were killed when troops were searching an Arab village near Hartuv. Three others were wounded. The third Arab reported dead by the government was found near the Jewish settlement of Beth Alpha. Of those arrested, 21 were seized at Kfar Belah when troops conducted a search for ammunition.

Mexican Fascists Plan To March on Capital

"Come on horses, burros, goats if necessary," he said in his call to action. The Gold Shirts will protest present governmental trends, although declaring their loyalty to President Cardenas. The exact date for the march was not set.

Hindenburg Reported Over Newfoundland

New York, June 24 (AP).—A radio report from the German dirigible Hindenburg, en route to Germany, gave her position at 5 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today as 49.25 north latitude, 56.08 west longitude.

This would be somewhere over Newfoundland on a route farther to the north than those followed on previous trips across the North Atlantic.

Japanese Fleet May Curb China Customs Patrol

Destroyers to Be Tokyo's Reply to Attacks; New Civil War Threatens.

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, June 24.—Indignant Japanese hinted tonight a warship squadron would be the answer to Chinese marine attacks on suspected smugglers.

A spokesman at the Japanese consulate indicated a squadron of destroyers was being sent from Port Arthur to patrol the Gulf of Chihli, North China's vast harbor.

The Japanese hinted, too, they might demand complete withdrawal of Chinese customs patrol vessels from northern waters unless "the situation is ameliorated."

China's troublesome problem of smuggling—for which the Chinese have blamed Japan—struck a crisis Monday when a customs cruiser fired on a Japanese vessel off Tangku. Two Japanese were reported wounded.

Delayed Japanese reports from Tsingtao, Shantung Province, said also four Japanese seamen had been hurt when a Chinese cruiser fired on the Japanese Moeki Maru on Sunday.

Advices from Tsinan—likewise through Japanese channels—stated four Chinese brigands had slain a Japanese merchant, mistreated his wife, and escaped.

Civil War Again Threatens.

Hongkong, June 24 (AP).—Threats of civil war in China revived today when troops of Kwangsi Province, of the Canton southwest regime, were reported to have made a bloodless advance deeper into Hunan Province, which is under the protection of the National (central) government at Nanking.

There was a brief, casualtyless skirmish with National government troops in the advance, said advices from Changsha, capital of Hunan.

Official circles in Nanking charged Japan has agreed to lend Kwangsi Province $5,000,000 Mexican ($1,500,000) to finance her army.

The Canton regime was reported to be formulating further demands upon Nanking.

Newspapers in Nanking, apparently officially inspired, demanded a punitive expedition against South China. Reflecting the graver turn of the situation, Canton currency fell in the exchange market.

The demands Canton is formulating are believed really designed to Kai-Shek, virtual dictator of the Nanking government, and to win concessions for Canton. Southwestern leaders are bitter political enemies of Gen. Chiang.

Demands Being Drafted.

These demands were reported being drafted for the agenda of the forthcoming meeting in Nanking of the central executive committee of the Kuomintang (dominant government political party and the only one officially recognized in China):

1. Mobilize the whole nation to resist Japan.

2. Sever diplomatic relations with Japan.

3. Emancipation of the masses and restoration of free speech and the liberties of the people.

4. Resist with armed force the influx of Japanese troops into North China.

5. Repudiation of "humiliating" Sino-Japanese agreements.

Unless these questions are included in the agenda, it was said, Canton threatens not to attend, and unless all the proposals are approved it will withdraw and call on the nation to recognize Canton as the national seat of the government, after which the anti-Japanese program would be carried out.

Democrats Select 3,000 as Speakers

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP).—Setting its big guns in place for the campaign oratory in August, the Democratic National Committee speakers' bureau said today 3,000 persons were listed to make speeches for the national ticket.

The list comprises Senators, Representatives and Governors. Paul Aiken, director of the bureau, said more "are coming in all the time" to volunteer their services.

At present, he said, the bureau is merely filling requests for speakers for various political meetings, but in late August itineraries will be made up and the speakers will start their tasks.

Representative Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, head of the Congressional Campaign Speakers' Bureau, reported he would have about 100 Representatives available for general campaigning purposes.

15 Steel Firms Are Ordered To Cease 'Restraining' Trade

By the United Press.

The Federal Trade Commission last night "cracked down" on 15 steel companies manufacturing most of the country's tin plate output by ordering them to cease operating an alleged conspiracy to restrict trade.

The order specifically demanded that the producers stop "entering into agreements not to sell or quote prices on 'stock plate' to jobbers and manufacturers of tin cans and other containers."

The commission found that "these companies made such agreements resulting in suppression of competition and a tendency toward monopoly in the interstate sale of tin plate."

It charged that the agreement "tends to create a monopoly in the manufacture of tin containers in the American Can Co. and the Continental Can Co. by depriving their competitors, small manufacturers of tin containers, of their normal source of supply of tin plate."

Firms Listed.

The companies mentioned in the order were the American Sheet & Tin Plate Co., Bethlehem Steel Co., Canton Tin Plate Corporation, Columbia Steel Co., trustees for Follansby Brothers Co., Granite City Steel Co., Inland Steel Co., Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, McKeesport Tin Plate Co., Republic Steel Corporation, N. & G. Taylor Co., Washington Tin Plate Co., Weirton Steel Co., Wheeling Steel Corporation, and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

The order came as a bombshell to steel merchants who have registered increasing complaints about the "growing hostility of the Federal Government." President Roosevelt earlier in the week asked the Justice Department to take "appropriate action on a Federal Trade Commission report charging collusive bidding by four large steel companies on PWA projects."

The industry's organ, the Iron Age, charged that hasty acceptance of the collusive bidding report by the Administration "for obvious political purposes indicated quite clearly that the steel industry has already been singled out as the whipping boy of the political campaign."

"Cease Co-operation."

The FTC order last night specifically directed the respondents to cease and desist from acting in co-operation with each other by entering into agreements not to sell, offer for sale, or quote prices on "stock plate" and from refusing, pursuant to agreement, to sell or offer to sell "stock plate" to jobbers and manufacturers of tin cans and other metal containers.

"Stock plate" is known as "seconds" resulting from the manufacture of the first grade of tin plate called "production plate." Resaid to force small container manufacturers to pay higher prices for "production plate."

Counsel for the principal tin plate companies contended that the "stock plate" classification was discontinued largely because improved manufacturing methods had reduced its production to a negligible amount.

Young Republicans To Rally Saturday

Woodstock, Va., June 24 (AP).—"An intelligent warfare against the forces now Tammanyizing America" will be among objectives to be considered by young Republicans of Virginia at their first State convention at Massanutten Military Academy here Saturday.

In addition to giving attention to what John F. Locke, Woodstock, chairman of the Virginia Council of young Republican activities, described as "heavy taxers, wild spenders" and "annihilators of constitutional government," the convention will elect State officers and two junior national committeemen, and study problems of State organization.

Locke's call for the convention was addressed to all "Young Republican Clubs, leaders and party workers, members and prospective members in every county and precinct in Virginia." Leaders have estimated that between 1,500 and 2,000 will attend.

Miss Dolly Madison, vice chairman of the young Republican National Federation and president of the New Jersey Young Republican organization, will be among the chief speakers.

Goethals Memorial Group Is Appointed

A commisison of six to prepare plans for the erection of a memorial in the Panama Canal Zone to Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals, builder of the canal, was appointed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Members of the commission are Gen. John J. Pershing, Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas; Col. Julian L. Schley, governor of the Canal Zone; Brig. Gen. Robert E. Wood, retired, who was a director of the Panama Railroad Co. during the building of the canal; former Representative Swager Sherley, of Kentucky, a member of the House Appropriations Committee during the construction of the canal, and Col. John C. O'Laughlin, of the District of Columbia, chairman of the Goethals memorial committee.

The commission is to recommend to the President the type of design for the memorial, the site where it is to be erected and to submit an estimate of the cost of construction for consideration of Congress.

Britain Receives First Of New Torpedo Boats

Portsmouth, England, June 24 (AP).—The first of six new high-powered motor torpedo boats which British experts assert are likely to revolutionize naval design and construction was handed over to the admiralty today.

The craft, which will be inspected by King Edward June 30, is able to maneuver so deftly it is considered here to be invulnerable to an air attack. It can do more than 40 miles an hour. Carrying a crew of ten, the vessel is equipped with two torpedoes, which may be fired by radio, and light gun armament. Eighteen of the boats, it is said, can be built at the cost of a single destroyer.

Roper and Daniels Pay Bryan Tribute

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Secretary Roper and Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, praised the late William Jennings Bryan today as the "forerunner" of the New Deal at a memorial breakfast.

Members of the three-time Democratic nominee's family were introduced. They were two of his children, William Jennings Bryan, jr., a California delegate, and Mrs. Grace Bryan Hargreaves, of Washington; their children, Betty Bryan and Evelyn Hargreaves, and the Commoner's sister, Mrs. T. S. Allen, of Lincoln, Nebr.

Daniels said Bryan, if alive, "would give thanks to God for the Supreme Court because, while the majority may be too technical, the minority opinions are repairing the crack in the Liberty Bell."

Three Arrested In 'Numbers' Raid

Three colored men were arrested and charged with operating a lottery yesterday when vice squad police raided an alleged "numbers" establishment in the 1800 block of Eighteenth street northwest.

Those arrested—Clifford Williams, 41, and Massie Williams, 32, both of the 1900 block New Hampshire avenue northwest, and James E. King, 19, of the first block Patterson street northwest—were released under $1,500 bond each after they were arraigned before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Police said the place was opeated under the guise of a cigar stand and that a quantity of "numbers" slips and marked money was seized. A new type of slip, resembling a retail store sales slip, was being used, police said.

Briton Renews Charges Italy Plotted Attack

By the Associated Press.

London, June 24.—An opposition member of the House of Commons returned to a charge tonight Italy planned an attack on Egypt last summer despite a government denial information of such a plan was found in the wreckage of an Italian plane near Cairo.

Geoffrey Mander, opposition liberal, stated:

"I have information from a number of sources which I regard as reliable that plans for an Italian attack upon Egypt did fall into the possession of the government last summer and immediate action was taken."

Mander served notice he would ask the foreign secretary July 1 what plans of such a nature came into the possession of the government between July and September of 1935, what representations were made to Italy and what action was taken.

Earlier in the day Viscount Cranborne, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, answering a question in the House of Commons, denied plans for such an attack were found in the wreckage of a Fascist plane near Cairo last August.

Following a vote of confidence won by the government on its decision to lift sanctions from Italy, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden prepared to leave for Geneva for a meeting of the League Council Friday.

Selassie Also to Go.

Also going from London to Geneva will be Emperor Haile Selassie, in exile from his annexed kingdom.

The Swiss Federal Council at Berne decided today to ask the Emperor not to live in his villa at Vevey as long as "the Italo-Ethiopian conflict is unsettled."

A spokesman here for the Emperor said the Negus would go to Geneva Thursday, but whether his majesty will appear personally at the League meetings will not be settled until he gets to Geneva. No decision has been taken as to who will represent Ethiopia."

Trade Resumption Sought.

By the United Press.

Rome, June 24. — While Geneva prepared to bury sanctions, the Italian government today was deluged with inquiries from European business houses, anxious to resume trade with Italian markets.

Proposals from abroad were considered carefully, but official quarters dropped hints that the government would hold import permits to a minimum until provisional trade agreements have been negotiated with the former sanctionist powers.

New treaty negotiations are expected to be started as soon as the League of Nations officially revokes sanctions. The government will bargain in the interest of Italian industry, which lost millions of dollars backing Premier Benito Mussolini's program during the economic siege.

Miss Beck and her fiance were honor guests at a luncheon Mrs. William Barron Kerkam, jr., sister-in-law of Mr. Kerkam, gave yesterday at the Shoreham.

Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Kerkam, sr., will entertain in honor of her son's fiancee at a tea at her home on Thirty-fifth place.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Suitor, Uneasy Lest He Lose His Sweetheart's Love, Tells Questions Which Trouble Him.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 27 years old and deeply devoted to a girl who is 19. Am I too old for her? My love for her means far more than I could possibly express, even if I should go into a discussion of genealogy, genetics, etc. To me she embodies all those qualities and virtues that would be found in the ideal wife and mother. She is more settled and mature than most girls of her age, who have been brought up in similar surroundings. Although she is a senior in high school and I am a junior in college, her basic knowledge of spiritual values and sterling qualities of character exceeds and is far superior to any knowledge that I have been able to acquire during my college career. And she loves me.

* * * *

Now, Miss Haworth, the things I am about to ask you are questions which make me a bit nervous and uneasy. If she were occasionally in the company of other young men would there be any danger of my losing her? And if she should find some other young man whom she might love more, would it be my duty to withdraw and offer every assistance for her future happiness? Is a girl's love apt to alter under changing conditions and circumstances?

* * * *

We plan to be married when she finishes high school and I complete my college work. If my salary would enable us to live comfortably and also pay another year's tuition, do you think it would be fair to ask her to marry me next year when she finishes high school?

I am trying to look at the matter from a reasonable standpoint, but find it rather difficult. Any suggestions you may offer will be greatly appreciated by one who is a little ANXIOUS.

DEAR ANXIOUS: If you were occasionally in the company of other young women, would there be any danger of your loving your best girl less? Is it not likely that the contrast afforded between her and other girls would cause you to love her the more. I am sure your immediate answer to the latter question will be an emphatic "yes." Why not assume, therefore, that the same would apply to the girl. If your love for each other is the real thing, there is little danger that her association with other young men will change her devotion to you. Such association will probably only send her back to you each time with her devotion intensified.

* * * *

However, if in the course of human events, she does meet another man whom she decides more nearly measures up to her concept of what her husband should be, you would have no choice, but to step aside. But why make yourself miserable worrying about things that may never happen? It has been said there are two things men should never worry about. One is the thing he can't help. The other is the thing he can help.

* * * *

As to whether a girl's love is apt to alter under changing conditions and circumstances, was it not Shakespeare, that incomparably wise and understanding student of human nature who said: "Love is not love which alters when it alteration finds?" In other words, if the girl's love for you is not of an illusory and romantic nature; if it was brought into being through respect for and appreciation of splendid qualities of character in yourself; if all that is good and fine in her finds its emoplement in your goodness and kindness, it is scarcely probable that changing circumstances will cause her love for you to diminish. On the contrary, changing circumstances might cause her to cling to you the more, as the one ualalterable and dependable actuality in a changing universe.

* * * *

Matthew Arnold in his poem, "Dover Beach," beautifully expresses a lover's concept of mutual fidelity as the one rock-like verity in life, in these words:

"Ah, love, let us be true
To one another! for the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams,
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,
Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain
Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight
Where ignorant armies clash by night."

* * * *

Rather than torment yourself with fears, why not strive for such composure of spirit as will cause your sweetheart to look to you always for strength, guidance protection, encouragement and consolation.

* * * *

If marriage is financially possible within the year following your sweetheart's graduation, and if she is willing to become your wife at that time, it might be best for both of you to go ahead and get married. In saying this, I am taking it for granted that the girl is, as you say, mature beyond her years and that she would realize the gravity and forever-and-everness of the step she was undertaking. M. H.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Keep Blood Vessels Open.

The water supply of a great city, a village, or a farm is safeguarded as a public health measure. But water for home use is relatively minor in importance when compared with blood that must reach every tiny living cell within the body. Good circulation depends upon (1) a normal pumping chamber (the heart), (2) good food to feed the blood forming organs, and (3) a sufficiency of blood vessels of adequate caliber. Just as we must make certain that water pipes cannot become clogged so we must see to it that arteries shall remain free and open for the passage of blood.

There are some diseases that bring about narrowing of the blood carrying channels. Within recent years one of these, thromboangitis obliterans or Buerger's disease, has been brought forcibly to our attention because of the occurrence of many cases of gangrene (death) of the tissues of the extremities—the toes and the feet particularly.

Obvious symptoms of Buerger's disease usually manifest themselves first as pain in the legs and feet, the left side chiefly. These may be dismissed by the patient as unimportant twinges or cramps of rheumatic origin. On reflection, the patient will often admit that he had noticed for some time a feeling of discomfort or fullness when compelled to remain standing for any length of time. Sometimes the sensations are merely of coldness and numbness. As the disease progresses, however, the limb changes in color and is pale when elevated, but reddish to purplish when lowered.

Much can be done to prevent the disease. In all probability, the continuous and excessive use of tobacco is responsible for some blood vessel damage. With the first symptoms (intermittent pain or changes in color) it is well to cut the tobacco consumption sharply. A pain in which the extremities will be warmed by means of some type of electric baking apparatus should then be adopted. Heat applications twice daily of one-half to one hour each are of great value. Immersing the parts alternately in hot and cold water as an occasional procedure is suggested.

The objective is to improve the circulation of the affected limb to the point where it is practically normal. Even though some blocking of the blood vessels has occurred, with the stimulation afforded by heat, new channels, sufficient to maintain circulation, may form. The employment of a type of suction apparatus has been found to be of aid in a few cases. The primary rules of hygiene—keeping the feet warm, clean and dry, using properly fitting shoes, and avoiding constricting garters—must be observed strictly. In advanced cases typhoid vaccine or removing certain ganglia of the sympathetic nervous system may be resorted to.

Widows Have Double Duties Toward Sons

Too Much Coddling Leads Them Into a Life of Futility.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. BROWN was a widow with an only son. She felt the responsibility of her position very keenly, and was, furthermore, wrapped up in her child as the one hope and joy of her life. If she could have wrapped him in cotton batting she would have done so, and as it was she guarded him so closely that he scarcely felt any contacts from the world outside.

He must not play with the other children lest he get diseases or learn bad manners and naughty words. Even when he went to school he had little or no opportunity for contacts, since he was personally conducted to and from school, and as result of his home training was too shy to mix with the others during recess.

He never went to boarding school or camp, and by the time he reached college was too firmly set in the training of his early childhood to make any friends or acquaintances. His mother thought him perfect. She rejoiced in his charming manners, his deference to older women, his love of home.

"He is a son and daughter both to me," she kept saying, "and without him my life would be futile."

That she had, by her selfishness and short-sightedness, made his life futile she never knew. While she lived he had a purpose—to make her happy. When she died, he was still in the prime of life with nothing but memories to live by.

The widowed mother of a son has a double duty to perform. She must be father and mother both and develop a man's point of view. As far as possible, she should mix the boy in the world of men.

New Hat Inspired By Flower Pots

The new high-crowned chapeaux look like reversed flower pots resting lightly on curled heads and, besides being tall themselves, have tall trimmings jutting straight up in front.

Chinese Shun Hats But Do Like Silk Hose

Chinese women do not wear hats and very few affect corsets. They do, however, wear silk stockings. There is little demand for foreign-style dresses among Chinese women, but such as there is, including foreign women, is being met with dresses turned out by Chinese tailors trained by Russian emigres who opened up many retail shops selling fashionable dresses made in their own shops.

Etiquette for Today

FREE AS AIR is modern youth! The chaperon has joined the rubber-tired buggy and the Gibson girl. So nowadays the girl herself has to know her etiquette!

She won't jump into an automobile without giving a man time to open the door for her. A well-bred man expects to do these courteous little things. Give him a chance.

The smart young modern knows that you do not usually take a man's arm when walking with him in the street. Except, perhaps, in the evening if you are wearing high heels and crossing bad paving in a dim light.

She says "I'm sorry," not "Pardon me," and "How do you do," not "Pleased to meet you." She introduces members of her family as "my mother," "my father," "my sister," (unless the sister is married) not as "Mrs. Porter," "Mr. Porter," "Miss Porter." Sounds too stiff.

She knows enough to squeeze a quartered lemon in her tea with her fingers, but to use a spoon to press a round slice of lemon in the cup. She eats an artichoke leaf by leaf, dipping it into the sauce while holding the leaf in her fingers, not trying any feats with a fork.

Such etiquette points she must have ready on the instant, to be considered smart and modern. Our 40-page illustrated booklet, "Etiquette for Every Day," sets you right on all these matters. So handy for checking up. Be sure, and you'll be at ease.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

Chapter XV.

BUT AFTER she had left him she wondered within herself why Philip was so insistent as to what had happened being kept so absolutely secret. It was the sort of adventure that might have happened to any one, though given her husband's lifelong knowledge of boating she could not but feel surprised at the loss of the rowing boat. As to that she supposed, nay, she felt sure, that Ruth had been responsible. Some day, no doubt, Philip would tell her exactly what had happened. And, meanwhile, she, Iris, shuddered inwardly at the thought of how very nearly they had lost what when alone together the husband and wife called their "gold nugget."

Wearily, after having left Philip, she went back to their paying guest's bedroom.

"We'd be so grateful if you would keep to yourself that horrid adventure, Ruth. We don't want any one to know anything about it till the boat has drifted back or till Philip has bought another. It's Lady Cicester's property, of course."

"I shouldn't think of telling any one about it," said Ruth.

"Make light of it to Lord John if he should have happened to have heard of what occurred, won't you?"

"Indeed I will."

The girl now lying easily back in the fine old four-post bed smiled a little tremulously at the woman to whom she knew she had owed her life. She told herself that there had been something very fine about the way Iris Trefane had behaved over the whole affair.

Then, just as Iris closed the bedroom door, Ruth turned round and saw the full moon. With a curious feeling of half fear, half relief, she remembered Mrs. Shipton's words. "Remember that the moon is your friend. You'll be safe from harm when she's at the full——"

The morning after what had been at the time so terrifying an adventure, although being young and strong she had now put it quite behind her, all that Ruth remembered when she awoke was that she was going out riding this afternoon with a man who, however homely he might be, had in a way fascinated her yesterday.

As she opened the door of the great hall and glanced across at the corner where stood the dining table, she noticed that Iris and Philip had begun breakfast, and as she came toward them she saw with concern that Iris looked extremely ill this morning.

All that had happened yesterday evening now came back to her. She even recalled how, when they had waited down here for a moment before going upstairs, Iris had exclaimed in a shaky voice. "I feel shattered tonight," adding "what I suppose you would call 'all shot to pieces.'"

And something else came back to Ruth's mind when she glanced at Philip Trefane and noted his pleasant debonair expression. This was a most vivid memory of the extraordinary, at the time it had happened, the utterly unnatural and terrifying, expression there had been on his face when at last he had turned round in answer to her agonizing cry, "It's my heart! I simply can't go on swimming."

The husband and wife were sitting next to each other, although four places had been laid, for the captain's step-daughter, Helen Bates, who up to now had never appeared at a meal.

Now Philip Trefane had just had what was extraordinarily rare; that is, what to himself he called "a scrap" with his adored Iris; so he was not sorry to see Ruth join them. Iris had again begged him to arrange for an immediate production of the play.

"We haven't really begun," he called out heartily, getting up as he spoke.

Ruth wondered uncomfortably why so nice a man was so apt to tell stupid little lies. The captain had not only begun, he had practically finished his breakfast, and as she came close to him she saw that he was just going to light a cigaret.

"I want you to do me a favor," she said smiling.

"Granted!" he exclaimed with mock solemnity.

"The truth is—I'm afraid you'll both laugh at me—but it would make a great deal of difference to my happiness if you'd have a real bath put in near my room! It could be taken away when we leave if Lady Cicester really meant what she said yesterday when she declared that she had liked the castle better before there had been any water laid on."

As there came no immediate answer to her request she added quickly what she had already learned was an open sesame to the keen attention of this couple. "Of course I'd pay everything connected with making a bathroom. Can it possibly be managed?"

She looked at him pleadingly as she went on. "It sounds rather absurd, as we're only here for a few weeks. But still it would make a real difference to me. You see, I've been used to a real bathroom all my life, also I can't bear to see poor Rose dragging up those big cans of water."

Iris said sharply. "Don't waste any pity on Rose. It's her job to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water."

Then, after a moment or two's thought she exclaimed: "I don't see why there should be the slightest difficulty about putting in a bath. It's simply a question of money; also, of course, we shall have to tell Lady Cicester."

Philip intervened with more energy than he usually showed.

"I don't see why we should tell Aunt Albinia anything about it. Besides, she ought to be delighted. Even one bathroom would make a difference in the rent next time she lets the castle."

He broke the silence again.

"I've got a splendid idea!" He turned to his wife. "If Ruth doesn't mind sleeping in the annex, turning the second room on the upper floor there into a bathroom will be a simple matter—in fact, the annex solves the problem.

"The annex?" echoed Ruth in a puzzled tone. "Where is that?"

"Haven't you seen the annex?" he asked, and as she shook her head, "About 30 years ago this place was let on a seven years' lease and the tenant, who was an eccentric artist, built a queer kind of two storied bungalow up against the left wall of the castle to live in during the winter months. He made a kind of studio on the ground floor, and there are two good rooms above the studio."

Iris exclaimed. "But Ruth couldn't sleep there alone, surely?"

"Of course she could," he said quickly. "She'd be no further off from us there than she is now."

"I don't mind where I sleep," observed the American girl, smiling, "and I do long for a bathroom."

Iris still looked surprised and doubtful, but her husband went on: "There's quite a nice bedroom, and the room next it could easily be turned into a perfect bathroom. Also there would be no trouble about either water or heating."

"You mean the water could be brought down from the cliff flower garden," said his wife, "and that some kind of heating apparatus could be rigged up by running electric power from the dynamo house?"

"That is what I do mean."

"We shall definitely have to ask your aunt's leave to use the water from the spring and the power. Also, considering how mean she is, I expect she'll want to be paid both for the water and the electricity."

It had come to hurt Ruth Starling to hear the way these two always spoke of Lady Cicester. She could not forget what Mr. Singleton had said of her kindness and generosity to her dead sister's son. Why, what sort of a summer would Philip and Iris have spent but for the loan of the castle?

Iris, who at this time of the day restricted herself to toast Melba and two cups of strong tea, got up from the breakfast table.

"I'd better drive myself to the manor house now; then I'll come back for you, Phil, and we'll go into Lilyford and see the builder. If possible we'll bring him back with us."

She turned to Ruth. "It's wonderful what money will do, isn't it? We shall only have to offer the man five pounds over his estimate, and give a big tip to his workmen, and what would take days to get done will take hours!"

To Be Continued.

Typical Wife Of a Kiwanian Is Individualist

SINCE THE Kiwanis Club has been in convention here, much has been made of its members' priding themselves on being "average business men."

But what of the average business man's wife? Is she a social butterfly or a career woman? Is she a club worker or exclusively a homemaker? Does she content herself with being merely a background for her husband, or does she win acclaim as an individual?

If Mrs. Harper Gatton, wife of the international president of the Kiwanis Club, is to be taken as an example, the typical woman whose husband belongs to a service club is an attractive, alert person with a wide range of interests and enough accomplishments to deserve attention not only as "the wife of——" but on her own account.

Visit in 47 States.

Yesterday in her suite at the Mayflower, Mrs. Gatton found a few minutes free from a breakfast party to tell something of what her activities have been since her husband was elected international president of the Kiwanis Club, and to reveal incidentally what her absorbing interest is.

"We have spent much of this year traveling, visiting Kiwanis clubs from coast to coast," she said. "We have been in 47 States; the only one we missed was Vermont."

During that time, she has had a chance to observe the workings of men's organizations and to meet women throughout the country. As a result of this opportunity, she has drawn some refreshing conclusions about women in general and clubwomen in particular.

"Of those I have met, I have found that the average wife and mother has some absorbing interests quite apart from either her home or her children," she said. "It may be a career or a 'cause' or a civic organization. Anyway, it is some activity that makes her feel she has a part in public life."

She pointed out, however, that in general clubwomen were more concerned with social phases than any other part of their organization. "I thought so, that is, until I came to Washington and attended a meeting of the Soroptimists," she went on. "Those women got right down to business and discharged it as speedily as men do in their organizations. The social side is obviously relegated to second place, as it should be, with that group."

School Music Her Hobby.

Mrs. Gatton is a member of a number of clubs, but her chief interest aside from her home and her family is public school music. She was a teacher of music before she met her husband. Both were on the faculty of the Teachers College in Bowling Green, Ky., when their romance began.

After marriage they moved to Madisonville, Ky., where Mr. Gatton is now superintendent of schools and where she is in charge of the high school band, glee club and orchestra. She is also active in church work.

Wife of Club Leader

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. HARPER GATTON, wife of the international president of the Kiwanis Club, has as many interests and activities as her husband.

1936 Fashions At Conventions Very Like 20's

Tunic Dresses, Worn in Harding-Cox Days, Return.

NEW YORK (AP).—Turn back through the fashion plates of past political conventions and you will find that some of the styles seen this year were "high fashions" in 1920.

"Tunic dresses" were in style then, at the conventions that nominated Cox and Harding, and this year—after 16 years of advancement by women in public affairs—tunic dresses are back in style.

Here are some political notes on women from the gay days of 1920, showing their status then:

At the Dolly Madison breakfast of the Women's Democratic League at the Astor Hotel a woman voiced an objection to a political principle, and was told by the chairman, "please remember to act like a lady."

A writer reported from one convention, "Women have had their first real taste of national politics this year * * * they are mystified by the secret party conclaves."

Jury Refuses To Give Chef Slayer Death

11 Petersburg Citizens Testify for McNamara; Appeal Undecided.

William M. McNamara, 20, who killed John Mikedis, chef in a K street restaurant, was saved from the electric chair last night when a District Supreme Court jury refused to return a first degree murder verdict and found him guilty of manslaughter.

McNamara, surrounded by his attorneys, Frank J. Kelly and E. Russell Kelly, readily admitted he was pleased with the verdict. He professed to be greatly pleased with a chance to rehabilitate himself and to seek vindication.

Only a bare handful of spectators was in Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue's court in the District Supreme Court late yesterday when the jury reported, after 90 minutes' deliberation that it had arrived at a verdict. When the foreman intoned the verdict of guilty of manslaughter, McNamara, head bowed, raised his eyes and smiled gratefully.

The charge against the Petersburg, Va., youth was that, in a desperate effort to effect a reconciliation with his estranged wife, he had gone to the place where she was employed as a waitress and had vainly begged her to return to him. Overwrought by her refusal, he whipped out a small caliber pistol and blazed away.

In the ensuing melee, Mikedis was shot and killed and Samuel J. Alley, manager of the restaurant, was wounded. Later on, while in a cell at the District Jail, McNamara is said to have expressed regret that he had not killed Alley, whom he charged with being instrumental in keeping him separated from his wife.

Defense attorneys last night had not indicated whether they would stand on the conviction or would seek a new trial for McNamara, who appears to be little more than a boy. It was explained he had been married to the attractive Ruth McNamara when he was but 17 and that the couple had been estranged for more than two years when he sought to have her return to their mail Virginia home.

Testimony before the jury indicated that McNamara had gone to the place where his wife was employed and had begged her to go with him. She obtained a short leave of absence and sat in a car with him while they discussed their differences. After she had refused to go with him, the husband followed her into the restaurant, and in a fury shot blindly at whatever he saw.

Among the defense witnesses yesterday were 11 citizens of Petersburg, McNamara's home. They included a lawyer, a priest, a school teacher and physicians and business men.

All described McNarmara as a nervous high-strung youth who grieved over his separation from his wife. All said he had a good reputation.

The youth blamed Alley for keeping Mrs. McNamara from rejoining him and then said he would kill himself before his wife's eyes in an effort to show her that he really loved her. Meantime, Mikedis, the chef, emerged from the kitchen to see what the trouble was about, and was shot and killed. After that Alley was shot, though he was only slightly hurt.

Justice O'Donoghue ordered McNamara be kept in the District Jail until he is brought up to face sentence. The law provides a maximum of 15 years, but the indeterminate law cuts that to a maximum of from 3 to 15 years Sentence, providing the conviction stands, will be pronounced next week.

$7,000,000 City Building Plan To Begin Soon

Prompt launching of the $7,000,000 construction program authorized in the 1937 District appropriation act was forecast yesterday by District officials as an aftermath to signing of the $43,500,000 supply bill.

The small courts building in Judiciary Square will be the first major project to be started, as plans already have been drafted in anticipation of the initial appropriation of $1,000,000. Advertisements for bids will be published by the Commissioners within two or three weeks. The building, when finished, will cost approximately $1,500,000.

Replacement of Chain Bridge will be much later getting under way. No plans have yet been drawn, but the Commissioners have decided informally to erect a similar structural steel span. The District act carries a $250,000 appropriation and a $350,000 authorization.

One of the problems to be determined is whether the bridge is to have two or three traffic lanes. The latter would allow speedier traffic movement, but would be more hazardous on account of the passing of vehicles. The respective widths would be 32 and 24 feet.

The bridge is to be raised 8 feet on the Virginia side and 5 feet on the District side, to escape future floods such as the one last spring.

A group of architects, possibly as many as ten, shortly will be employed to draft plans for the Petworth Library and the nine school buildings and additions authorized in the District act.

The school building program amounts to $1,402,500, the largest single item of which is $353,000 for an addition to Eastern High School. The Petworth Library appropriation is $75,000, with an authorization of $150,000.

Mary Lou and Big Brother, 2, Stray From Home, Are Returned

Mary Lou Jones and her big brother, Melvin, who is 2 years old, strayed yesterday from their home into a strange world throbbing with automobile horns and marching people and flashlight bulbs.

Neither of them larger than a 45-second minute, Melvin and his baby sister, who is 16 months, "took a walk" and made almost half a mile before they were halted by Policeman R. B. Miller at Second street and Florida avenue northwest.

Mrs. Viola E. Jones, mother of six more youngsters besides Melvin and Mary Lou, was on the second floor of their home at 1738 Lincoln road northeast when the youngest two of her brood bolted. She missed them almost immediately and notified police.

But the rebel pair had been apprehended, forwarded to the Receiving Home and partaken of lunch before police and mother succeeded in straightening out the matter. Though well behaved in their temporary quarters, Melvin and Mary Lou were mighty glad to see Mother Jones when she called for them around 1:30 p. m.

According to police, Mr. Meiklejohn was cleaning a gas stove when the cloth caught fire. Meiklejohn threw it to the floor and ran to get some water.

In trying to get the cloth off the floor, Mrs. Meiklejhon was burned on the hands. She threw the blazing cloth from her and sparks fell on the other women. None was seriously hurt.

Parks Office Maps a Schedule For 14-Day Vacation in Capital

Atlantic City, the Adirondacks and other summer resorts may look to their laurels, for notice was served them yesterday that Washington, humidity or no humidity, is putting in a strong bid for the vacation traffic.

Instigated by the civic-minded office of National Capital Parks, a 14-day vacation schedule to promote greater use of the District's golf courses and bridle paths has been mimeographed and is being distributed far and wide.

A sturdy body, affection for a brassie and the will to rise early in the morning are among the prerequisites for taking advantage of the tailor-made regimen, which is, inexpensive, if somewhat rigorous. The taker also should know how to swim, ride, drive a car, play tennis, bait a hook, paddle a canoe, understand polo, whiff river breezes and play an iron out of a sand trap. Nor will the program's full benefit be enjoyed if he does not have an ear for music.

Here is the schedule, somewhat condensed:

Monday—Eighteen holes of golf in East Potomac Park, a swim and dive in McKinley Pool with its "purer than drinking water" and a drive around Hains Point, all for an outlay of 50 cents plus gasoline. (You will, of course, furnish your own clubs, balls, bathing suit and auto.)

Tuesday — Hike through Rock Creek Park where, "if you get up early enough you may be favored with a glimpse of a red fox, raccoon or ring-necked pheasant." (Or even a hippopotamus, if you take in the zoo). Subsequently, spectatorship at a West Potomac Park polo game and, in the evening, a free band concert.

Wednesday — Golf at Anacostia Park (beware the Eastern Branch water hazard), a splash or two in Takoma Pool and a moonlight drive over Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway.

Thursday—Tennis at any of the parks-operated courts for a dime an hour, "another swim at your favorite pool after your tennis workout, then go down to the Ellipse to witness a good baseball game."

Friday — Fishing in the Tidal Basin, horseshoe pitching with night tennis for a chaser an dthence back to the room for alcohol treatment (rubdown).

Saturday—Spend the whole day picnicking in Rock Creek Park, where you may roast "weenies" (quotes are parks office's) go wading and curl up with a good book, "all free."

Sunday—Horseback riding and a nature trail party.

Monday—Golf in Rock Creek Park (don't underrate that ditch on the seventeenth hole), another swim and evening rowing on the Tidal Basin.

Thursday—More golf, more polo and, if you are still holding up well, another rubdown if administered in absolutely quiet surroundings will probably bring you around to Friday.

Friday—Fishing, tennis, croquet in Meridian Hill Park and a campfire program in Rock Creek Park.

Saturday—Astride a horse to skirt the pansy beds and rose gardens of West Potomac Park. Drive to Mount Vernon in the afternoon.

Sunday—Outing at Hains Point.

Trial Halted As Husband's Slayer Faints

Mrs. Connelly Breaks in Testimony; Hearing Resumes Today.

Defendant Cites Dead Man's Threats; Son, Daughter Aid Her.

The trial of Mrs. Alice J. Connelly, accused of slaying her husband, Park Policeman John F. Connelly, on March 18, came to an abrupt recess in District Supreme Court yesterday as Mrs. Connelly, after describing the shooting, fainted and toppled slowly from the witness chair.

"I didn't eman to do it. He drove me to it. I loved him and I love him still!" she sobbed. Then her head bent slowly to her breast and she slid from her chair. She was caught before she struck the floor by J. Wesley Gardner, clerk of the court.

James A. O'Shea, defense counsel, had just finished questioning Mrs. Connelly and was about to allow Henry A. Scheinhaut, prosecutor, to begin cross-examination. Mrs. Connelly had been on the stand for about an hour.

Carried to Table.

After fainting, she was carried to a counsel table by Gardner and two jurors. Dr. John E. Lynn, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who was in the courthouse on another case, pronounced her unfit to take the stand again immediately. Judge Peyton Gordon recessed the court for the day.

Before a hushed crowd in the courtroom, Mrs. Connelly had told of her husband's brutal conduct toward her during their married life. Then, answering O'Shea's questions in a flat monotone, she described the events of the St. Patrick's Day celebration that preceded the shooting.

Her husband, she said, began drinking early and seemed unusually depressed. The couple went that night to a restaurant near their home at 2220 Eighteenth street northwest, where they quarreled.

After their return, she said, Connelly threatened to choke her. She then took the revolver from the place where she had hidden it.

Pointed Gun at Self.

"I held it in both hands," she murmured, and then paused for a moment before concluding, "and then I pointed it at myself."

Mrs. Connelly had previously heard her daughter, Frances, 18, and her son, John, 20, testify in her behalf. Both said that their mother had on several occasions been brutally beaten and kicked by Connelly.

Dr. Norman C. Shoemaker and Dr. James A. O'Keefe told the court they had treated Mrs. Connelly for bruises which the frail, 38-year-old woman said had been inflicted by her 175-pound husband.

Others on the stand yesterday were park policemen who said that Connelly was brutal and unreasonable when drinking, and neighbors of the Connellys who were introduced as character witnesses for the defendant.

The case is expected to go to the jury today after cross-examination of Mrs. Connelly by Prosecutor Schweinhaut.

Recipient of Bonus Jailed for Alimony

Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Supreme Court yesterday ordered Anthony W. Canella, retired policeman, to serve 60 days in jail because of his failure to pay on his alimony arrearage of $1,160, although he held bonus bonds aggregating $839.

The contempt of court order was entered at the request of Jean Boardman, attorney for Mrs. Barbara Canella, who charged her husband had been ordered to pay $20 a month for the support of a child. The order was entered, it was asserted, after District courts had set aside a limited divorce obtained by Canella in Florida and had awarded the wife a limited divorce here.

In passing sentence, Justice Luhring stated, "The court will take judicial notice of the ability of the respondent to pay at least a portion of his arrearage." The husband can purge himself of contempt by paying the arrearage.

With Mother After 4 Long Years

Girl, 8, in Litigation 4 Years, Won by Mother, Brought Here

Eight-year-old Betty Lugaresi, daughter of Mrs. Nettie Madigan, of 3614 Connecticut avenue, and her former husband, Terzo Lugaresi, retired member of the Marine Band, was back in the arms of her mother last night, after four years of litigation.

"I love my mommy," she said. "better than my poppy. I love my dolly, too!"

Five days ago Justice Joseph W. Cox, in District Supreme Court, who, in 1932, gave the child to her father when he was awarded a divorce, ordered the youngster transferred to her mother's custody. This was after Mrs. Madigan, through her attorney, Jean Boardman, had filed a petition saying she had married Joseph Madigan, and was able to provide a suitable home for Betty.

After the decision last week, Mrs. Madigan left immediately for New York. She found the little girl in the Bronx, with Lugaresi and his second wife. Betty was sick, but Mrs. Madigan removed her forcibly and started for Washington.

The musician won his divorce after a bitterly contested action in November, 1933. Two efforts by the mother in District Supreme Court to regain the little girl and one hearing before Judge Fay Bentley ended without success for her.

Dinner Honors Major Brown's Work for Safety

Offutt Credits Drop in Child Traffic Fatalities to Police Drive.

The advisory board of the American Automobile Association last night gave a dinner at the Willard Hotel in honor of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, and the 13 members of his force who acted as cooperators in the schoolboy patrol program.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the A. A. A. board, presided and credited the police force wih reducing traffic fatalities among children between the ages of 5 and 14 from 50 in 1926 to only 2 last year.

Lauds Maj. Brown.

He introduced Maj. Brown as "the man who has risen from being the only policeman in Georgetown boys were not afraid of to the greatest moral force today in the District of Columbia."

He called Isaac Gans, of the A. B. C. Board, "Washington's sweetheart." Others whom he introduced and who rose to praise the police were Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic; Inspector Benjamin A. Lamb, of the traffic bureau, and Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Back From Milwaukee.

Washington's traffic officials, recently returned from a visit to Milwaukee where they studied traffic control systems of the Nation's "safest city," met yesterday in the office of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, to plan for local improvements.

The group, headed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, is expected to submit recommendations to the District Commissioners next week.

Van Duzer said no announcement of local plans would be made until the group completes a study of data collected on the trip. In addition to Van Duzer and Capt. Whitehurst, members of the group are Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent; John Nolan, of the Park and Planning Commission; George Keneipp, of the Keystone Automobile Club, and Richmond B. Keech, of the Public Utilities Commission.

Body Urges Neutrality Law to Ban Loans to Belligerents.

Resolution Asks Further Benefits for All Disabled Veterans.

Concluding its three-day encampment at Thomson School last night, the District department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars urged that the United States adopt a permanent neutrality policy that would forbid making loans or sending supplies to warring nations.

The veterans adopted a resolution favoring mobilization of capital, labor and industry and the elimination of "abnormal profit" in time of war.

The entrance of the United States into the League of Nations or the World Court was opposed by the veterans, and went on record as opposed to fascism, communism and dictatorship.

Urge Immigration Curb.

Another resolution adopted would reduce the immigrant quota by 90 per cent and admit only close relatives of persons already in this country or laborers whose skills did not compete with American labor.

The resolutions were all adopted in accordance with the organization's "Americanism" program. Another group of resolutions urging veteran welfare legislation was taken up separately.

These asked for a more effective system of giving veterans preference in employment in all Government agencies; for legislation providing additional compensation for unemployability caused by injuries received in service, and for a minimum of $40 a month to permanently disabled veterans whose disability was not caused by service.

It was also decided to request the establishment of a national cemetery in each State.

McCathran Elected.

Col. Wallach A. McCathran was elected department commander, succeeding Edward K. Inman, who was indorsed by the group for national council membership.

McCathran, a former major of the District National Guard, served on the Mexican border in 1916, and later in France with the 162d Infantry. In his speech of acceptance he said he intended to devote his entire time to the office.

Others elected last night are senior vice commander, Leonard A. Bacon; junior vice commander, Philip A. Belt; quartermaster, David B. Herman; judge advocate, Philip F. Biggins; department surgeon, Dr. John B. de Mayo; department chaplain, the Rev. Howard B. Snyder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Atonement.

Mrs. T. E. Fawcett, of 1404 Allison street northwest, was named department commander of the Ladies Auxiliary, V. F. W., as the organization closed its annual encampment at Pythian Temple.

Airways Parley Held in Capital

Bureau of Air Commerce officials today will be confronted with the task of shifting $15,000,000 worth of suggestions for needed air navigation aids to determine how best to spent the $800,000 appropriation allotted the bureau by Congress for the purpose.

The suggestions were made to the bureau yesterday at a conference of representatives of all the country's air transport lines, private aviation operators, Army, Navy and Coast Guard fliers, postoffice aviation officials and heads of several State aviation departments.

From the 1,000 or more recommendations of the various conferees the board will make up a master list of the most necessary aids and will draw up appropriate projects. Additional funds are expected to be sought from the PWA and WPA.

Among the suggestions of local interest were that the bureau's radio beacon into this city be relocated; that a teletype be set up between Washington and Cincinnati; that a lighted airway be established between the two cities; that the Federal airway from Washington to Nashville Tenn., be completed, and that the airways between this city and Pittsburgh be straightened.

Stellar Films Are Announced For Tomorrow

Edward G. Robinson, who achieved his greatest screen success as "Little Caesar," returns to the silver sheet at the Earle Theater tomorrow in "Bullets or Ballots," said to affort him an even better role as Johnny Blake, the detective who determines to put the boldest of the gangsters out of business. The story was written by Martin Mooney, the reporter who went to jail rather than divulge the sources of his information concerning the underworld. In this thrilling subject, "torn from the headlines of the daily press," the star is supported by a splendidly chosen cast, led by Humphrey Bogart, Barton MacLane and Joan Blondell. On the stage, the Yacht Club Boys, a quartet of singing comedians, will headline the vaudeville bill in their original songs and parodies. Others on the bill will include Nellie Arnaut and Brothers; Tommy Trent, with "The Puppet Parade," and Earle and Fortune, with Virginia Pope.

Robert Taylor, who has taken on new stature as a screen personality since his appearance opposite Janet Gaynor in 'Small Town Girl," and Loretta Young, last seen opposite Franchot Tone in The Unguarded Hour," share an unusual romantic problem in "Private Number," announced as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. A wise-cracking type of comedy is contributed to the picture by Patsy Kelly and a bit of austere dignity by Basil Rathbone. The story hinges upon Mr. Taylor's marriage to his mother's maid and the acute situations that secret alliance endangers. "Three Little Wolves," latest of the Walt Disney Technicolor cartoon comedies, added short-reel subjects and the Metrotone News will complete the bill.

"Abdul the Damned," featuring Nils Asther, Fritz Kortner and Adrienne Ames, will be the chief feature of the screen bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow, at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater. Abdul Hamid II, despotic ruler of Turkey during the early years of the twentieth century, is the central figure in this colorful and romantic drama. There is said to be a vein of historical fact threading the screen story of a famous Viennese dancer and the young soldier lover who fomented a revolution to save her from the harem. Kortner is the Sultan, Asther the lover, and Miss Ames, Therese, the dancer.

In "Three Wise Guys," foremost feature of the screen portion of the entertainment announced for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater, the pivotal roles are played by Robert Young, recently seen with Jessie Matthew's in "It's Love Again;" Betty Furness, Raymond Walburn, Thurston Hall and Harvey Stephens. The story is adapted from Damon Runyon's magazine yarn of the young newly weds who outwitted a trio of crooks. Donald Novis, popular tenor of radio and stage, next week will fulfill the headline engagement upon the stage that was canceled recently when the Bunchuk Symphony was held over. Others contributing to the vaudeville portion of the program will include Virginia Bacon & Co., in a dance revue; Buster West, dancing comedian, and Lucille Page, one of the theater's most remarkable acrobatic and contortionistic dancers. Fox Movietone News and Lampkin overture will round out the bill.

"Under Two Flags," the imposing picturization of the famous novel by Ouida, will be continued for a second week of its repeat engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow, with Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell in the roles of major importance.

So complete has been its triumph and so tenacious its hold upon the theater-going public of the Capital, that Universal's new screen version of Edna Ferber's "Show Boat," starring Irene Dunne, supported by Charles Winninger, Helen Morgan, Paul Robeson and hundreds more, will be held for a sixth consecutive week at RKO-Keith's. The auxiliary bill, including the new issue of The March of Time," also will be held over.

"Smilin' Thru," the Blackfriars' Guild production of the Jane Cowl play, originally scheduled for Tuesday night, will positively be presented tonight. If the weather permits, it will be put on in the National Sylvan Theater, adjoining the Washington Monument; if the inclement cold snap persists, the performance will be in Roosevelt High School auditorium, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

With the first really hot summer days, slightly antedating the chilly spell of the past few days, the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo Park set up new attendance records. On several occasions the previous 4,000-bathers-per-day record has been broken. Last Sunday an attendant clocked patrons through the gate to the pool at the rate of 16 per minute. This, however, is only one of Glen Echo's 50-odd attractions. The Spanish Garden Ballroom, with music by McWilliams' Orchestra, 12 swing artists; the rides, the Midway, the self-driven motorboats and many other features of this free amusement park provide entertainment for all ages and amusement tastes.

Broadway

New York, June 24.

There is a lot of loose talk along the Queerialto about friendship, but while there is an excess of talk, there is little of the genuine article . . . The Hatfield-McCoy feud of Kentucky would have served only as a trailer for the feuds of Fraudway . . . Even Al Smith is one of the feudal barons, his new attack on F. D. Roosevelt qualifying him as one of the more illustrious bad losers of this curious boulevard . . . There are instances galore on Broadway of those who can't take it . . . Al Smith belongs in the front pew.

• • • •

Guy Lombardo and Jan Garber are forever battling . . . Rudy Vallee and Will Osborne screamed and tore their hair over Osborne's amazing vocal resemblance to the Maine crooner, but Vallee went on to $1,000,000 and Osborne slid out of the picture . . . Al Jolson and Dizzy Dean almost came to blows in a radio station over the Dizzy one's insistence on telling jokes . . . George Givot and Parkyarkarkus don't talk, and the Greeks had a word for it . . . Abe Lyman and Col. Snyder, Ruth Etting's hubby, turn the air blue whenever they meet . . . Arnold Reuben won't talk to Dave, of Dave's Blue Room, and Dave doesn't even nod to Lindy . . . None of the restaurant men, however, gets mad at Jack Dempsey.

• • • •

Adolph Menjou, that well-dressed man, swears that he'll never appear in another picture with Ted Haly and Gregory Ratoff . . . Rotoff is burned at Ted Healy . . . This triple feud developed when they were filming "Sing Baby Sing," with Healy stealing scenes from both of them . . . John Steinberg, most peaceful of bonifaces, avers that he will get even with Jack Cummings, who knocked two teeth out of his mouth at the Trocadero on the Coast . . . Cummings is a director, son-in-law of Louis B. Mayer, the rhumba king . . . Gene Raymond and Bob Ritchie broke apart over Jeanette MacDonald . . . Lew Brown and George White slugged it out in the lobby of the Apollo Theater at the opening of "Scandals" . . . White outscored Rudy Vallee a few weeks ago.

• • • •

It is natural, of course, that bitter enemies should be created along Broadway, where everybody is trying to make a decent or indecent living . . . Particularly when the population of the Stem is composed largely of exhibitionists who keenly resent anybody who steals the spotlight away from them . . . Eddie McCarthy, of the New York A. C., who is not an exhibitionist, but who is a darned good right-hand puncher, chased Harry Richman out of El Morocco one night . . . Richman tried to make a dignified exit, but you can't be dignified when you're running . . . Dave Selznick gave John Barrymore a terrific lacing when Barrymore made a slighting reference to Dave's race . . . Selznick waited for him in the lobby of the Ambassador Hotel and slaughtered him, bouncing him all over the lobby.

• • • •

Fray and Braggiotti, who once played so sweetly in their piano duets, had a fist fight at a party in Connecticut and never have swapped small talk since . . . They even broke up their partnership . . . Burns and Allen and Block and Sully make it a point never to attend the same parties together . . . They were palsy-walsies once . . . Ditto Eddie Cantor and George Jessel . . . Or Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills . . . Jack Johnson and Joe Louis never hit it off, but Johnson had the last laugh via Max Schmeling.

About the Showshops

AT THIS season of the year, the National Capital presents a theatrical picture which, in some respects, is almost the diametrical opposite of New York's. With the close of the regular Broadway season, amateur, barn and semiprofessional summer groups spring up like mushrooms, to coin a pat simile, on Long Island, in nearby Connecticut, across the river in Jersey and up Westchester County way. They conduct productional enterprises that range from the revival of sure-fire successes to the experimental functions of a real laboratory theater.

BELL.

In Washington the season of amateur and semiprofessional activity exactly reverses this procedure. With the close of the regular season of living drama in the National Theater, enterprise in the playhouse here becomes stagnant until the following fall and early winter, except for the heroic and deservedly triumphant project fostered by the Roadside Theater, out on the Rockville pike. It is during the winter months that the Capital's noncommercial, resident "theater" gets in its licks. Only the planning is done in the summertime.

• • • •

It is a remarkable commentary upon the point of view of the amateur acting companies that provide an almost unbroken succession of local productions during the winter that only the Roadside attempts to lure hot-weather patrons to the box office. At a conservative estimate there are in the neighborhood of 50 separate acting organizations functioning in the Capital during the span of the regular season. At the time of year that ought to provide their most lucrative opportunities, they fold up until the following fall, places them once more in direct competition with the road show, concert and operatic season of "big-time" entertainment. The Roadsiders should be grateful for this gratuitous monopoly.

• • • •

But the summer months among the amateurs fall something short of a complete lethargy. For example, as long ago as June 6, the Drama Guild of Washington held its regular meeting on the beautiful, rambling country estate of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, in Bradley Hills, Md. At this time, Mr. Anton Hardt was elected president and Paul Bradbury Walter, vice president, for the ensuing year.

To fill vacancies on the board of governors, the following were elected: Prof. Marvin T. Herrick, Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, Miss Ethel Prince, Miss Dorothy Croissant, Dr. Frederick V. Rand, H. Eldred Wilson and Richard P. Creyke. Board members whose terms carry over from last season are Prof. W. Hayes Yeager, Mrs. Jane Plummer Rice, Marvin Beers, Lee D. Butler, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, of the District Community Center Department, and C. Marshall Finnan, of the office of the National Capital Parks.

The Drama Guild, under its new officers and board of governors, already is laying active plans for next year's productions, always among the most important staged by strictly local interests during the winter months.

• • • •

That energetically—almost belligerently—active group of newcomers to the Washington field, the New Theater Acting Group, following a recent general meeting at which their plans and purposes were cordially and frankly discussed with members of the press and others at interest, have definitely decided upon a provocative list of plays for production next season. Those that are definite choices for production include "Bury the Dead," recently read here with great success, but not acted; "Anna Christie" and "Peace on Earth." Tentatively selected for next year's roster are "Men in White," "The Lower Depths" and "Love on the Dole."

Open tryouts for the casts of "Bury the Dead" and "Anna Christie" will be conducted tomorrow night at 8 in the group's headquarters at 810 F street. John Mann will direct both productions.

• • • •

The newly elected board of governors of the Montgomery Players, at their first meeting on June 18, under the gavel of the new president, Jane Plummer Rice, outlined ambitious plans for the playing season of 1936-37. Four regular productions are scheduled for Leland Junior High School Auditorium on October 17, December 5, February 20 and April 17.

Unanimous agreement was reached upon Priestley's "Laburnum Grove" as one of the plays to be presented. This was given its premiere in the National Theater, season before last, with Edmund Gwenn in the stellar part.

The play-reading committee, under the chairmanship of Doris Dewey Day, presented tentative recommendations on behalf of half a dozen plays, including several recent Broadway successes, and final action on three of them will be taken at the next board meeting in July. "Post Road" is practically "in," although being subjected to further study.

• • • •

Never an organization to do much tooting of its own horn in advance of actual accomplishment, the Columbia Players, no doubt, also are knee-deep in plans for next year as well as in June. Quietly and unostentatiously the Columbians are building a repertoire of standard dramas, accumulating a wardrobe and steadily laying something by against the day when they may own and operate their own theater. Similar careful future planning may safely be presumed in the case of the Pierce Hall Players and others of the Capital's foremost groups of resident actors.

It is a crying shame that out of all this has not evolved, long before this, one central, civic theater company that might reasonably aspire to represent the National Capital's best creative ability and repeat the brilliant case history of the New York Theater Guild, which progressed from amateurism to a foremost place among the great producers.

Apropos-of-Nothing-Whatever Note.

It is astonishing how many theatrical projects that start out to be "so terrific" wind up by being merely "soporific."

Kiwanians Are Entertained by Dance Pageant

Lisa Gardiner Group Seen in Historical Revue, Rained Indoors.

Before a crowd of enthusiastic Kiwanis delegates and their wives, the Lisa Gardiner dancers staged an historical pageant, "Mount Vernon Memories," in Constitution Hall last evening.

Originally planned as an al fresco fete at the Sylvan Theater, properties had to be rushed to the hall when the cold wave descended on the Capital.

Presented in three episodes, the pageant opened with a representation of a garden party on the lawn of Mount Vernon in colonial days. Pupils of Miss Gardiner gave a charmingly executed minuet and a lively Virginia reel. The second episode, depicting Civil War times, featured the gay waltzes of that period and the famous "Jump, Jim Crow." The final episode presented modern ballroom manners, illustrated in the "Shag and Shim-Sham," perfectly done by the talented young dancers.

Mary Day, one of the most talented of the Gardiner dancers, executed a graceful solo waltz at the conclusion of the pageant, and Marjorie Mitchell and Walter Doe appeared in a whirling team number. Denis Connell played the role of commentor for the pageant, and Thomas Brahany acted as master of ceremonies for the event, introducing the entertainers, Fred East, Bill Raymond, Edward Steffe, George O'Connor and Jim McWilliams, of vaudeville fame.

Sidney, a loyal and active Kiwanian, was on hand with his orchestra, furnishing music for the entire evening.

Body of River Victim Found Near Canoe Club

The body of Reuben Glassman, 25, of 1719 Q street northwest, was recovered from the Potomac River yesterday when it rose to the surface near the Colonial Canoe Club. Glassman was drowned Sunday when he dived from a boat above the Three Sisters Islands, while sailing with a party of friends.

His body was taken to the Morgue, where it was identified by Leo Reuben, the dead man's roommate. Glassman was employed as a clerk in the Veterans' Administration.

Engler Heads Reservists.

Springfield, Mass., June 24 (AP). Lieut. Col. Oscar E. Engler, Infantry Reserve, of Omaha, was elected president of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States today. The 1937 convention will be held in San Antonio, Tex.

Oh, for a Life in the Open!

If this young man thinks he is carrying his bride over the threshhold of their honeymoon cottage, he ought to take his eyes off hers for a minute and look around a bit! The scene is from "Private Number," in which, as you will observe, the principal roles are played by Loreta Young and Robert Taylor, reading from suspension to feet on ground. This is the picture that will take possession of the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, and a very engaging one they say it is—all about a young scion of a wealthy house who fell in love with his mama's maid, or something like that.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, June 20.

GRACE MOORE and Franchot Tone in the flicker, "The King Steps Out," writes Delma Oids, "win a couple of statues as prizes for their shooting ability. Tone is without money and borrows some from the major. Yet when Miss Moore and Tone go over to a hot dog stand they eat all they want and pay for nothing. Doesn't seem fair, does it?"

GRACE MOORE.

Continuing with the same flicker, Delma Oids discusses that sequence in which Miss Moore and Tone are dancing together. "In all the scenes before this, Grace Moore is without a hat; suddenly, she is wearing a huge hat. I noticed it because it kept getting in Tone's way as they danced together. Then, a few minutes later, they sat at a table and the hat disappeared. This is a good example of that movie magic."

• • • •

In the flicker, "Trapped by Television," Nat Pendleton is showing his muscles to Joyce Compton and after he finishes he puts on his coat. His sleeves are rolled up. However, in the next scene, claims Vic Alberty, the cuffs of his shirt sleeves show below his coat sleeves. "Can't make me believe," says Vic, "that he didn't have something up his sleeve."

When the district attorney in "Fury" is showing the picture in the courtroom, insists Frank Nelson, he stops the film in order to identify certain of the accused. But, according to the sound, the camera keeps on running and clicking. The movies ought to know at least how to show a movie.

Writing about the flicker, "The Princess Comes Across," Clarrette Sheon declares: "I believe I have found two movie boners. I could not stay through the picture a second time to check up to be absolutely positive, but when Carole Lombard gave her ring to the blackmailer she took it from the third finger of her left hand. Yet, when she awoke at night and realized that the ring was gone, Carole touched the third finger of her right hand, as though the ring had been there.

"The other boner is when Carole went out to meet the reporters on the deck of the ship. She left her stateroom empty-handed, going directly to the reporters. When she re-entered her stateroom, she had a large muff in one hand and a purse in the other, both of which she threw down on the lounge in her cabin. Maybe Carole Lombard can explain this to you when you see her."

• • • •

Only 'Routine' For Zioncheck, Says Hospital

By the Associated Press.

Towson, Md., June 24.—Dr. Ross McC. Chapman, superintendent of the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital, today said Representative Marion A. Zioncheck would be given "routine treatment" and would have "no special privileges."

The Washington State Congressman, whose recent escapades put the Capital in an uproar and ended with a mental examination, arrived at the hospital here late yesterday. He was brought in an ambulance from Gallinger Hospital at Washington.

"Mr. Zioncheck is quite comfortable here and slept seven hours last night," Dr. Chapman said.

"We have been told by Gallinger Hospital physicians he is suffering from an illness from which he will recover. He will be given the routine treatment here and will have no special privileges.

"Our examination of the patient has not been completed and probably will not be completed for several days. He will not be permitted to have visitors for at least two weeks. I understand he has been an efficient public servant and he will eventually go back to his work. His wife, his sister and his secretary have conferred with us here and they are agreed that a course of treatment for him is the best course to follow."

Cotton Heads British Open Qualifiers

By the Associated Press.

Hoylake, England, June 24.—Henry Cotton, the dour prodigal son of British golf, led the field in the 36-hole qualifying round for the British Open championship today with 139, four shots ahead of Gene Sarazen, who topped the five American qualifiers.

Other Americans who qualified, with their scores today and their totals, were Ted Turner, Pine Valley, N. J., 72-146; Willie Goggin, San Francisco, 73-150; Joe Azar, Waco, Tex., 75-150, and Errie Ball, Mobile, Ala., 74-154.

T. Dennis Boardman South Hamilton, Mass., and Frank Ball, Tannersville, N. Y., failed to qualify. Boardman shot an 83 for 162, and Ball took a 77 for 164, well outside the qualifying limit of 155.

It was left to an unknown caddy to furnish the drama in today's play. Walter Smithers, a caddy at Sunningdale, who shot a 71 over the comparatively easy Wallasey course yesterday, toured the first nine of the back-breaking Hoylake course in 33 today and had a great chance to take the lead away from Cotton, but the galleries converged on him down the last few holes.

He blew up at the finish and took three straight 5s for a 70 and a total of 141. This put him in second place two shots back of Cotton and two ahead of Sarazen and Percy Alliss, the British Ryder Cup star. Alliss added a 74 today to his 69 of yesterday.

Richard Burton, another British Ryder Cup player, finished a stroke back of Sarazen and Alliss, with 73, 71—144, and a stroke ahead of Hector Tmomson, newly crowned British amateur champion; Bert Gadd and George Johnson, all of Great Britain. Thomson shot the lowest score of the day, a 68 over Wallasey. Gadd, who had toured the same layout yesterday in 68, fell off to a 77 today.

Sarazen was playing spectacular golf all day. He putted and recovered well, and this made up for inferior second shots to the greens. At the second hole, he exploded out of the sand into the cup. He knocked in a 25-foot putt at the fourteenth and a 15-footer at the sixteenth.

Alf Perry, the defending champion, barely qualified. He shot a 76 over Hoylake for 154, one stroke under the margin. Arthur Havers, another well-known British internationalist, was right on the line with 155, and Ernest Whitcombe, a member of the British Ryder Cup team last year, shot himself out when he took a 78 at Wallasey for a total of 159.

The survivors start the 72-hole championship tomorrow. They play one round then and another single round on Friday. The 60 low scorers at this point play the final 36 holes for the title on Saturday.

Goodman Advances In Mississippi Golf

Sutter, Tulane Star, Wins Match

Evanston, Ill., June 24 (U.P.).—Ernest Sutter, of Tulane, led four seeded players into the quarter-finals of the national intercollegiate tennis championships today but four others were eliminated. Sutter defeated John Law, of Stanford, 11—9, 6—2. George and Russell Ball, Northwestern; Chuck Carr, Southern California, and Dick Bennett, California, all seeded in the draw, were beaten in a day of upsets.

Ralph Minnich, Princeton, whipped George Ball, 6—2, 7—5 and Lindsey Franklin, unranked Texan, turned back Russell, 6—3, 6—3. Gardney Mulloy, Miami star, ousted Carr, seeded fifth, 7—5, 12—10 and Ramsey Potts, North Carolina, became a quarter-finalist with a 9—2, 6—2 victory over Bennett.

Kocsis-Haas College Golf Winners

By the United Press.

Glenview, Ill., June 24.—Two rounds of match play bit deeply into the field of 32 survivors in the thirty-eighth national intercollegiate golf tournament today and left all but eight strewn over the North Shore course.

Sharpshooting entries from Louisiana State and Michigan, headed by the favorites, Fred Haas, jr., of Louisiana State University, and Chuck Kocsis, Michigan captain, led the way into the quarter final round.

Haas, the medalist and only player in the tournament to crack the difficult par 72, swamped Lou Fehling, Notre Dame, 8 and 6, in the first round and came back in the afternoon with a 2-and-1 victory over Wilbur Kokes, Illinois amateur champion.

Paul Leslie, another Louisiana player, defeated Art Doering, Colorado College, and Patrick Malloy, Notre Dame. Leslie beat Malloy, 2 and 1.

Bill Barclay, another Michigan star, barely turned back R. C. Fisher, Yale, 1 up in his first match, but suddenly hit his stride on the second round today and blasted Nelson Munger, Texas, from the tournament with a brutal 7 and 6 assault. Munger won only the first hole.

Other quarter-finalists were Verne Stewart, Stanford; J. O. Levinson, Yale; Willie Turnesa, Holy Cross, and Jack Malloy, Princeton.

Crowder Leaves Tigers, Baseball

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 24.—Alvin Crowder, Detroit Tiger pitcher who has struggled against dual handicaps of a sore arm and a stomach ailment this year, asked today to be placed on the voluntary retirement list for the remainder of the season.

Crowder, nicknamed "General" because of three years of Army service, has been in organized baseball since 1922 when he joined the San Francisco Club of the Pacific Coast League. He played with Winston-Salem, Rochester, Waterbury and Birmingham before going to the Washington Senators in 1926. He was traded to the St. Louis Browns in 1927, but returned to Washington in 1930.

His best year was 1932, when he won 26 games for Washington and lost 13, pitching 327 innings, more than any other pitcher in the league.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Uniontown, Pa., June 24.—It took a Fort Necessity CCC boy to break the unbeaten record of "Tiger" Tygerson, the wrestler of the Cole Brothers-Clyde Beatty circus, who has been putting all volunteer opponents out of the running.

By the Associated Press.

Hurlingham Club, London, June 24.—Firing goals through the disorganized opposition defense almost at will, America's polo forces defeated Great Britain, 15 to 9, in the third and final game for the International Cup today.

The game was really an exhibition, for the invaders had clinched the cup previously by beating the British, 10-9, and 8-6, in the first two matches of the series.

Although Winston Guest and Mike Phipps, who played in the first two matches, were replaced today by Bobby Strawbridge and Elbridge Gerry, the Americans carried far too many guns for the home team. Capt. Humphrey P. Guinness, back for the British in the first two matches, gave way this time to Capt. George Prior-Palmer and the change resulted in a badly weakened defense.

Gerry scored eight goals for the winners, but it was the No. 3, Stewart Iglehart, who was the mainspring of the fierce American attack. Eric Pedley, at No. 2, scored four goals and Iglehart three. Strawbridge alone failing to score for the winners.

America never was behind after Pedley's goal on a pass from Strawbridge tied the score at two-all in the second period. The invaders tallied five goals in the third chukker for an 8-to-4 lead and that definitely settled the issue.

Jones Is Talk Of English Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, Eng., June 24.—David Jones, former Columbia University star and the latest American tempest to strike these parts, passed from the all-England tennis championships today, but left an impression that will be hard to forget.

The tall former collegian had old-time spectators searching the past for something comparable with the cannon-ball service Jones levelled at Wilmer Allison, the American champion, in their second round match.

As had been expected, Allison won. The scores were 14—12, 6—3, 6—4. In the ninety minutes the match lasted Jones was credited with 44 service aces and veteran observers agreed immediately it was the hardest service they've seen since the amateur days of Bill Tilden.

His bullet delivery, however, eventually got him in trouble. Owing to the low trajectory of the shot he served a number of double-faults which virtually dissipated whatever chance he had of upsetting his titled compatriot.

Favorites Win.

The men's field entered the third round with the eight original favorites still in the running—the defending champion, Fred Perry, Gottfried von Cramm, Adrian Quist, Allison, Jack Crawford, Donald Budge, H. W. (Bunny) Austin and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant.

John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, the fourth American survivor, will meet Perry tomorrow in one of the two outstanding third-round matches. Van Ryn defeated Hans Timmer, Holland, 6—4, 8—6, 6—3. In the other France's No. 1, Christian Bossus, will meet Baron Con Vramm, Germany's topmost flighter.

Except for "Bitsy" Grant all of the favorites came through in straight sets. Budge was the most impressive, winning from Ian Collins, former British Davis Cup player, with the loss of only five games, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1. Budge meets Jean Lesueur, of France, tomorrow.

Grant, who rallied from a two-set deficit to defeat Heiner Henkel on Monday, spotted Maurice Delofford, former British junction champion, the first set and then thrilled the spectators by turning on the heat and winning out at 4—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—1.

U. S. Women Survive.

While Helen Jacobs was idle, America's two other survivors in the women's division, Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, advanced to the third round in straight sets. Mrs. Andrus defeated Mrs. K. Bowden, 6—4, 7—5, while Miss Babcock vanquished Mrs. F. V. Fontes, 6—2, 6—3.

Miss Babcock's next opponent will be Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany and Denmark. Seeded fifth, Frau Sperling today defeated Patricia O'Connell, of Great Britain, 7—5, 6—2. Miss Jacobs will return to action tomorrow against Jacqueline Goldschmidt, of France.

Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, who has been playing brilliantly, scratched from the singles as the result of a lame shoulder, but will continue as Budge's partner in the doubles. Mako was scheduled to have met Boussus in the second round.

Covington, Ky., June 24 (AP).—Mack Garner, whose turf career includes a Kentucky Derby victory in 1935, defeated F. W. Dempsey, Covington, 1 up, in a second-flight match in the Kentucky State amateur golf tournament here this morning and then hastened to the Latonia track to ride this afternoon.

Olympic Group Needs $146,000 To Finance Trip

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, said tonight that with but 20 days remaining before the boat sails, $146,000 still was needed to send a representative American team to the Olympic games in Germany.

"In 1920 the team embarked without the committee having enough money to get it home," Brundage said, "but this year the committee has decided it must have adequate funds for the whole trip before the start is made."

The team sails on the S. S. Manhattan July 15, Brundage pointing out the athletes must know whether funds are available at least five days before to make plans to reach New York.

"Unfortunately, the largest and most important teams, in whom the greatest public interest centers and on whom depends American prestige, are the ones needing assistance," Brundage said.

Detroit Edges Red Sox by 7-6 Score

Detroit, June 24 (AP).—The Tigers took the rubber game of their series with the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 6, today, counting the winning run in the eighth on Marv Owen's homer over the scoreboard.

A four-run splurge in the sixth gave the Red Sox too much to overcome against Tommy Bridges' effective hitting, although they threatened to the end, with Wes Ferrell hitting a homer in the eighth, and old Bing Miller, filling in for Dusty Cooke, smashing one in the ninth.

Yanks Outslug Chicago Sox By 18 to 11

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 24.—The New York Yankees "murderers' row" led the Chicago White Sox to the scaffold today, and with young Joe DiMaggio in the role of chief executioner, smashed out an 18-to-11 victory in a wild slugfest.

DiMaggio not only paced the batters with two homers and a pair of doubles, but clouted both of the round-trip blows in the same inning to equal the major league record.

His four-baggers drove in five runs in the Yanks' huge 10-run spree in the fifth, when Jake Powell also connected for the circuit with the bases loaded. In the course of the battle Frank Crosetti and Bill Dickey also hit homers for the Yanks, while Luke Sewell did the same for the White Sox.

Mint Bud Wins Charles Town Feature Race, Returns $16.40

Miss Joyous Worth $77 In Sixth

Daily Double Pays $61; Long Shot Players Have Big Day.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 24.—Mint Bud, sired by Bud Lerner, one of the best mudders in turf history, found the tough, rough going under her hooves today and galloped off with the Gaithersburg Purse, the day's feature race here in the mountains. Ridden by J. Hernandez, the 5-year-old mare made every post a winning one to get home a length and a half ahead of Dr. Jillson. The well beaten third in the field of eight was Visa.

There was a tip on every horse in the race and the public had a hard time finding a favorite. Dr. Jillson finally won that doubtful honor which added the payoff of $16.40 on Mint Bud.

Rains last night left the track in wretched condition. The mud was all that the time-worn expression "a fetlock deep" implies. Both horses and riders came back from the races covered with mud.

A crowd of some 4,000 was on hand despite the cloudy, threatening skies. Betting was brisk and a daily double pay-off of $61.80 was in order on the 1-2 combination of Landsman and Big Dipper.

The day was given over to the long-shot players and there were large prices displayed on the results board throughout the afternoon. The high for individual mutuels was reached in the sixth race when Miss Joyous brought $77 worth of joy to her backers by taking a nose decision from Customer.

The feature race was all Mint Bud. Jockey Hernandez steered the mare wide to keep out of trouble going to the first turn and once in front, he drew over to save ground. Dr. Jillson was soon installed in the role of chief chaser and he was doing just that at the finish.

Sonnenberg, Koverly, Cox, Barber Face Rough Brothers.

By Bill McCormick.

One for all and all for Promoter Joe Turner. Rudy, Emil, Joe and Ernie Dusek—the Four Musketeers of Matdom—will descend en masse upon Griffith Stadium tonight in what promises to be the best outdoor show offered this season.

Ordinarily one Dusek is enough to necessitate riot calls, two Duseks tear the joint to pieces and three Duseks are a disaster. What will happen when four Duseks get into action probably will be too horrible to mention.

Rudy, the senior member of the quarrelsome quartet, is scheduled to tangle with Joe Cox, the Kansas City sandstorm, in one of two finish matches on the outstanding card.

Rudy Is Rough Gent.

Rudy is the roughest of all the rough Duseks. Cox has defeated every Dusek in the ring with the exception of Rudy—and he has done it locally. What will happen when rough, ribald Rudy goes after revenge should be so gruesome as to cause strong men to faint—and weak women to scream with joy.

Ernie, the second-oldest and, next to Rudy, most quarellsome member of the troupe, will snarl at George Koverly, of Terre Haute, Ind., in the other finish feature. Koverly generally is considered the most fiendish wrestler in the ring today, which has made all the Duseks more than a little bit jealous, and angry. Ernie will be seeking to take care of that.

Emil Dusek, who hasn't been around the racket long enough to get quite as tough as his older brothers, will engage roly-poly Gus Sonnenberg in a 30-minute preliminary. Gus is the guy who is responsible for modern-day wrestling. His flying tackle revolutionized the game and if Emil beats him it will serve him right.

Joe Versus Barber.

Joe Dusek, the baby of the family, is slated to work 30 minutes against Hank Barber, of New Jersey, in another supporting bout. Hank is an old-timer and a man pretty well versed in the science of the sport.

By way of relief from the Duseks, handsome Irish Jack Donovan, the pride of the Auld Sod contingent, will engage Mike Romano, who also is an old-timer well-versed in the science of grapple and grunt.

The reduced summer scale of prices of 55 cents, $1.10 and $1.65 will prevail for this show. While a record crowd is expected for the affair, Promoter Turner advises that, because of the size of the stadium, many very choice seats still are obtainable at the box office.

Ballston Cards Three Games, Plays Tonight

Ballston A. C. has an ambitious program for the next few days. Tonight at 8:30 Ballston will play host to Bill Jenkins' Red Sox. Saturday night Shady Grove will play at Ballston, and Sunday at 3 p. m., Ballston will engage the Celtics at the Ballston field.

and Ormsby. Time of game—Two hours 20 minutes.

Bowers Takes Rock Creek Golf Title

By Dave Herman.

Harold Bowers, the young man who manages West Potomac's nine-hole course, swung back into the golf spotlight yesterday by winning the Rock Creek championship.

Crossing paths with an old rival, Herman Allen, in the finals, Bowers played almost perfect golf to win, 3 and 2. Two years ago Bowers defeated Allen for the Anacostia championship.

Bowers displayed such machine-like precision with his shots that when the battle ended on the sixteenth green, he needed par in for a 68. The new champion was one over par for the 16 holes—great golf for that soggy, rolling course.

Before removing Allen, Bowers had a marathon morning duel with Andy Oliveri, 18-year-old District municipal junior champion, making a thrilling comeback to win on the twenty-third hole. Allen beat Mil Stein, 6 and 5.

Match Is Long.

That Bowers-Oliveri match was one of the longest overtime matches in local public links history. Oliveri, two up at the turn, stood on the eighteenth tee with a one-up lead. Bowers canned a 10-footer for his par four, and win, while Oliveri's putt lipped the cup. They played the next four holes in 4-4-3-5. Both scrambled about on the short fifth, but Bowers, in the woods in one, trapped in two, got down for a five, while Oliveri finished with a six. Bowers scored a 73.

Nick Altrock, the baseball comedian-coach, made sure he won a prize. Tied at 73 with Frank Ward for the qualifying prize, Altrock, despite creaking, aching legs, went out and defeated the Army officer in the playoff by three strokes. Altrock carded 76, Ward, 79.

Tennis, Not an Adagio Dance

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, professor of physics at Chicago University, apparently takes his tennis as seriously as he does his research. Careful there, Doc. Many a person has become punch drunk from kicking himself in the back of his head.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, Mo., June 24.

"Was Joe Louis doped?" is the substance of a handbill being circulated here in the Negro section of St. Louis and it is not surprising—the handbill, not the doping, if any.

Just as surely as summer follows spring, reports of skullduggery follow the big prizefight upsets. Certain elements refuse to believe that their idols can be beaten fairly and squarely and are eager to accept as gospel the flimsiest excuses for the upsets. The reports gain credence with the speed of wildfire, prodded as they are by eager listeners.

POVICH.

The custom of excusing their idols on veiled charges that they were doped before the fight is not exclusive either to Nordics or Negroes. Thousands of white men made the same claim after Jack Johnson knocked out Jim Jeffries at Reno in 1910, and there is another element who refuses to believe that Jack Dempsey was not doped before his first fight with Tunney in 1926.

The white man who was unwilling to accept the Johnson-Jeffries verdict could not conceive that the black man could knock out the man who had been rated as the greatest of all heavyweights. The fact that Jeffries had spent seven years of soft living before consenting to come back to the ring was overlooked as unimportant.

The main item was that the Negro had knocked out their idol and it just couldn't happen in a square fight. At the first suggestion that Jeffries was doped, irreconcilable and unthinking white men seized upon it as a hide-bound alibi for the upset.

Even Jack Dempsey's personal disavowals that his food had been tampered with or his drinks spiked refused to down the report that he had been poisoned before entering the ring against Tunney. How else could the Manassa Mauler lose to the light-punching Gene, thousands of Dempsey adherents reasoned. At the word of somebody that Dempsey "got it in his coffee," the report gained such credence that folks still believe it ten years after Dempsey maintained that the only thing wrong with him at the time was ring-rust, the natural ravages of age and the presence of an improved Tunney in the same ring with him.

And now, even in the face of a total absence of alibis from the Joe Louis camp, St. Louis Negroes are being told, and naturally are willing to believe, that Louis was doped. The fact that Louis might have been brought along too fast, that he was overconfident, and that he was beaten by a swell fighter in his own right are easily overlooked by the folks who choose to believe he was wronged somewhere between his training camp and the ring in Yankee Stadium.

The only occasion when a doping really occurred in an athletic event outside of the race track, as far as this department has been informed, was in one of those goofy marathon dance contests, one of which is operating in Washington or was at last reports.

Mr. Ray Alvis, who operates the walkathons, reports that the contestants are not above that kind of foul play. A favored couple in a Chicago marathon, who were a good bet to take down the $2,000 pot of gold that goes to the surviving team, wilted out of the contest one night and an investigation was ordered.

It was discovered that the walkathon favorites earlier in the night had gulped a pair of Mickey Finns along with their coffee which was served during the rest period, and the Messrs. Finn had done their work well. So had jealous and calculating rival contestants who had taken this means to better their own chances of winning.

They feed 'em at separate tables now, when the walkathons narrow down to a few survivors. The promoters don't naturally distrust the contestants. They're just taking no chances that one of the Messrs. Finn might mysteriously find its way into the stomach of the favorite.

Wray, Cornell Crew Coach, Is Ousted

Ithaca, N. Y., June 24 (AP).—Cornell's coaching reorganization caught up with Jim Wray, head crew coach since 1926, today.

Although Athletic Director James Lynah was enroute to Wyoming for a vacation and no formal announcement was made, it was understood that Wray had received written notice that his services would not be required when his present contract expires August 31.

Tom Bolles, whose University of Washington freshman crews have won at Poughkeepsie for three successive years, was mentioned prominently tonight as a possible successor to Wray.

Dempsey to Make Awards at Show

Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight boxing champion, will make the final awards at the second annual Columbus Horse Show Sunday afternoon at Bradley Farms, Md. The show opens Saturday.

Dempsey last night, speaking over long-distance telephone from Virginia Beach, told the Columbus show committee that he would be sure to be present. He leaves Virginia Beach Saturday and will be in Washington Sunday, making the trip aboard a Norfolk & Washington steamer.

Dempsey will bring a fitting close to the second major horse show Bradley Farms has had this year. Classes, designed to please both exhibitor and spectator, have been arranged by V. P. Lester, chairman of the committee. Four championship trophies will be awarded by Dempsey.

On the Air Today

The honor came to Elliott yesterday when Henry J. Kaufman announced that this annual competition for announcing honors had been won by the WJSV announcer. Elliott was a hot contender for the distinction last year when Kaufman first established his contest. Bill Coyle, of WMAL, won. This year found the situation just reversed, with Coyle the contender.

WRC's McIlreavy, who was popularly believed to be the winner just before the votes were called in, was on a par with Coyle as runner-up. McIlreavy has been in Washington only a matter of a half year or so, but in that time has proved to be a popular and efficient man on the air. Next year, look out for him.

Elliott will be fittingly honored at a luncheon next Tuesday, given by Mr. Kaufman. It will be attended by the judges and numerous announcer-contestants.

(Note: Announcer Elliott was grinning broadly yesterday when I saw him. He brings a cup to WJSV executive offices that has reposed impressively in N. B. C. executive offices for the past 12 months.)

Kate Smith has been paid a distinct honor. At least, that is my view of it. Beginning in the early fall she takes over the full hour on the C. B. S. net on Thursday nights, "opposite" Rudy Vallee and his Varieties. In radio lingo, "opposite" Vallee means at the same period he is on the air.

Now, taking over an air period "opposite" Vallee, Bowes or any other of the big shows of the air is no job for a novice. That goes particularly in the case of the alleged uplifting Major. And that applies in the field comedy, by way of special emphasis, too. It was not long ago that Eddie Cantor, and no less an entertainment personality, shied at a spot in competition with his widely favored contemporary, Jack Benny.

Some will say that Kate Smith is far removed from the category of the novice—quite capable of handling an hour in competition with Vallee. Others will say it is an ambitious undertaking.

I suppose of all artists in the C. B. S. list competent to try for a fair share of Vallee's audience, Kate is No. 1. Vallee, of course, has not drawn his large audiences in recent years for his own talents alone. His guest artists and variety of entertainment have been decidedly effective in building a reputation for his hour.

Similarly, Kate will not do a sole turn for a solid hour. She, too, will present a variety show with unusual dramatic and musical features. She demonstrated last year with her "Matinee Hour" that she can handle a full hour with ease.

Westinghouse Lifts Dividend To $4 Annually

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—Directors of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. today boosted the dividend rate with declaration of a $1 payment on the common stock, or $4 annually.

In the preceding two quarters dividends of 75 cents were declared. In August and November, 1935, payments of 50 cents were made. The latest disbursement is payable August 31 to stock of record July 31. Directors also ordered the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred.

Directors of Consolidated Oil Corporation inaugurated today a new dividend policy with respect to the common stock by declaration of an expressly designated quarterly dividend of 15 cents, payable August 15, to stock of record July 15. In April, 1936, and in October, 1935, interim dividends of 25 cents a share were paid, the latter marking the first disbursement since 1929, when 75 cents was distributed.

A statement accompanying today's declaration said "it is the intention to declare extra dividends in addition to this established rate when earnings jutify additional payments."

U. S. Smelting Votes $2.

Directors of U. S. Smelting, Refining & Mining Co. declared a dividend of $2 on the common stock, doubling the amount paid last March. Six months ago the company paid a dividend of $5 and in June a year ago $2 was ordered on the stock. The present distribution is payable to July 15 to stock of record July 3.

Gold Dust Cuts Dividend.

Directors of Gold Dust Corporation declared today a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, payable August 1 to stock of record July 10. Previously the stock had been paid at the rate of 30 cents quarterly.

George C. Morrow, chairman of the board, in a statement to stockholders called the reduction "necessary and in the best interest of the corporation." "Notwithstanding large non-recurring profits realized this year from the sale of securities," he said, "the net earnings of the corporation will not equal the dividend of $1.20 on the common stock."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Motor Stocks Led by Chrysler Spur Other Groups to Higher Level; Bonds Mostly Lower.

New York, June 24.—With a turnover of more than a million shares, for the first time in over a week, the stock market moved irregularly higher. Dominated by the motor shares from start to finish, the firmer tone brought only moderate gains in other groups and traders were not unmindful of the fact that many stocks acted poorly. Bonds were mostly lower, including the Government issues. September wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 96¼ cents a bushel.

Stock movements were dominated by the motor shares, which in turn were under the spell of Chrysler. The leader jumped 4 points and stirred enthusiasm for General Motors, which also turned buoyant, after a weak opening. Steel shares, on the other hand, had rather a poor day on unfavorable talk of prospects. U. S. Steel dropped a point, but recovered.

Some of the Eastern railroad stocks rallied from early sluggishness. In the specialty class price movements were diverse. In contrast to a weak market for Gillette, American Safety Razor jumped half a dozen points on a few sales. Consolidated Oil was bid up a large fraction when the stock was placed on a yearly dividend basis of 60 cents a share. Gold Dust sank into new low ground on announcement of a reduced dividend. Link Belt continued into new low ground despite declaration of an extra payment. McKeesport Tin Plate broke 3 points into new low ground on two sales.

Ups and Downs.

Commercial Investment Trust extended its recent advance. Chicago Pneumatic Tool common and preferred were lifted 2 and 4 points respectively. Evans Products lost 3 points. Commercial Solvents dipped into new low regions on increased volume. Melville Shoe climbed 3 points. Homestake broke half a dozen points to a new low on two sales, standing nearly 100 points below its best price of recent months.

Various classes of Ward Baking scored gains. Ulen lost a point or more than 20 per cent of its value. Timken Axle was active and strong. American Power continued to lead the utilities. Tishman Realty, on the curb rose more than 400 per cent in value. It sold last week at 75 cents a share. Today it brought $4 a share.

Foreign exchange again was placid on the surface. Francs were lower, but no further gold engagements were made. Sterling hardened as usual with the weakening franc. Reduction of The Netherlands Central Bank's discount rate, following similar action yesterday by the Bank of France, probably was ordered for the same reason that influenced French action, namely, a desire to help business with cheap money regardless of whether the gold standard could be maintained.

State of Trade.

Midweek trade news was mixed. The Iron Age, surveying the steel industry, concluded that the long-term outlook was poor. It based its conclusion on the prospect for higher wages, the intensive drive under way for unionization of the mills and the hostility of the Federal Trade Commission. According to that authority, the recent lift in third-quarter prices was a preparation for higher wages, and certainly the steel industry is facing some labor difficulties. Probably pessimism within the trade should be salted down a bit, but the situation draws attention to the real trouble with American business.

Cheap money and the dole and bonus system are helping in spots by adding to consumer purchasing power temporarily and by making it easier for corporations to lower charges on their bonded debts, but that policy does not get at the root of the trouble. Real purchasing power comes from production, and the economy of scarcity is doing much to hold down output. Moreover, refunding of debts at lower interest rates is an advantage to the present investor, but that does not open up opportunities for expansion of trade, which would mean more employment and greater purchasing power.

Arthur Cutten.

The passing of Arthur Cutten takes from the speculative world one of its most spectacular figures. Should men of comparable ability and audacity appear on the scene, the regulation that now hedges the speculative markets doubtless would prevent their operations from expanding into public notice. Mr. Cutten's death comes just after his victory in a long fight to recover his right to speculate in the Chicago grain market. He became famous largely through his operations in wheat, but Wall street knew him well as one of the shrewdest and best informed stock market operators it has ever had. The days of the wheat plunger definitely are over, cotton speculation by individuals has been reduced to picayune proportions long since, and the one-time powerful stock market operators are in the toils of SEC, in Europe, in other occupations, or decidedly under cover. Years ago, when the big market operators were still riding high, Fred Fisher, the motor magnate, and himself no mean player in the stock market game, said he regarded Arthur Cutten as the country's best security analyst, and that Cutten's opinion on stocks was good enough for him any time.

Chrysler.

After milling around for a while at only a fraction above the previous closing price, Chrysler in the noon hour shot up three or four points. A stream of buying flowed into the stock because, apparently of the conviction that dividends would be lifted to avoid the new penalty tax on surplus. One important brokerage house supplied an analysis to show that, taking the consensus on earings for this year—namely, $9 a share—the company would have to pay dividends of $8 a share if it wished not to increase the taxes it would pay to the Government. The analysis also said that the company was now free of debt, had written down its plants, and at the end of last March reported $70,000,000 in cash and marketable securities. It was shown that, assuming the higher dividend, Chrysler would reach 133 to yield 6 per cent. Some say that no stock split is likely unless and until the price reaches 150 or better.

Washington Banks Declare Dividends

Directors of the National Bank of Washington, at their regular monthly meeting yesterday, declared a semiannual dividend of $3 per share on the captial stock of the bank, payable July 2 to shareholders of record June 24. Transfer books will be closed June 24 and reopened July 2.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Liberty National Bank a dividend of $1.50 per share was declared payable July 15 to stockholders of record July 6. Transfer books will not be closed.

Lincoln Service Corporation.

Directors of the Lincoln Service Corporation declared yesterday the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock, payable August 1 to stockholders of record June 30. The directors also declared a dividend distribution of 25 cents per share on the common stock to stockholders of record June 30, payable August 1.

Import Threat Holds Down Wheat Prices

Prediction of Bumper Crop in Canada Also a Bear Factor.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 24.—Dominated by signs of unusual hesitance on the part of potential buyers, wheat values fluttered nervously today in 1½ cents limits, and finally got nowhere. The outstanding market influence was apparent fear of possible heavy imports of Canadian wheat into the United States, and back of this were predictions of a bumper yield of wheat in Canada this season, 400,000,000 bushels.

Wheat futures in Chicago closed irregular, ¼ cent off to ¼ cent up compared with yesterday's finish, July, 95¼@95⅝; September, 96⅛@96¼; December, 97⅛@97⅜; corn, ¼@⅜ advanced; July, 67; September, 65⅝@65½; December, 60½@60⅝; oats, ⅛@⅜ higher; September, 30½@30⅝, and rye at ¼ decline to ½ cent bulge; September, 65. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 10 cents down.

Dutch Bank Rate Cut to 4 Per Cent

Amsterdam, June 24 (AP).—The Bank of the Netherlands today reduced its discount rate to 4 per cent from 4½ per cent. Bank officials said the cut was caused by a halt in the recent withdrawals of gold reserves from the bank.

The Bank of France reduced its discount rate yesterday to 5 per cent from 6 per cent, also because of a stop in the outflow of gold.

Standard Power Output.

Chicago, June 24.—Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standad Gas and Electric Co. system for the week ended June 20 totaled 95,716,084 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 11.2 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

Stock Issues Show Steady Gain This Year

Revival of Interest in Equities Indicated by Rising Ratio.

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act indicates that in May securities with estimated gross proceeds of $319,318,654 became fully effective. This compares with $751,012,739 (an amount enlarged by the effectiveness of securities filed late in March to permit the use of September 30, 1935, financial statements) for April, 1936, and $140,208,002 for May last year.

While there were only a few fixed interest bearing securities included in the 59 registration statements covering 83 issues that became effective during the month, the number of common and preferred stock issues registered increased, representing the continuance of an unbroken upward trend in the relative volume of stock financing since January.

In all, in May there were registered 46 common stock issues for an aggregate of $88,913,000 (27.8 per cent of the total); 15 preferred stock issues for $31,505.000 (9.9 per cent); 13 issues of certificates of participation, beneficial interest, etc., for $13,713,000 (4.3 per cent); 5 secured bond issues for $79,118,000 (24.2 per cent); 3 debenture issues for $105,565,000 (33 per cent), and 1 issue of short term notes for $503,000 0.2 per cent).

In April the percentage of common stock was 22.5 and of preferred, 7.2; in March, 14 and 4.9; in February, 12.8 and 14.8, and in January, 9.9 and 1.1 Examination of the registration statements showed that stock issues by seasoned companies contributed largely to the increase, indicating, to a certain extent, a revival of public interest in offerings of equity securities.

Steel Activity Up But Future Is Less Bright

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—The current steel situation is highly satisfactory, with production holding at 71 per cent of capacity, Iron Age reported today. The longer term outlook, the magazine said, is far from encouraging largely because of labor unrest and unionization efforts and "the growing hostility of the Federal Government."

The peak of forward buying at second quarter prices is passed, it was said, and heavy consumer buying from a number of sources is admittedly prompted by the fear of labor trouble as well as by higher third quarter prices. In stressing the labor troubles, the periodical pointed out that one major steel plant has been closed by a strike for a full month.

Fully half of the steel tonnage booked during June has been prompted by price advances with the result that a large proportion of this month's production has been borrowed from July and August.

"The Federal Trade Commission's report on alleged collusive bedding by steel sheet piling makers and its hasty acceptance by the Administration for obvious political purposes indicate quite clearly that the steel industry has been singled out as the whipping boy of the political campaign," Iron Age said. "Proposed settlement of the FTC's case against the tin plate makers," it added, "with a consent decree will only add fuel to the fire."

THE COMPANY The Company, which has been in continuous operation since 1859, now owns 4,750 miles of railroad and operates 4,999 miles. It owns 71.78% of the capital stock of The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway which operates an additional 1,154 miles. These lines form a comprehensive system serving the Kentucky and Alabama coal fields, coal fields in western Virginia and eastern Tennessee, and important commercial and industrial centers of the Middle South from the Ohio River to the Gulf. The Company operates in fourteen States.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The net proceeds to be received by the Company from the sale of these Series E Bonds will be used, together with funds to be provided by the Company to the extent required, for the redemption of $3,500,000 of the Company's St. Louis Division First Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds due March 1, 1971, to be called for redemption on September 1, 1936 at 107%, $10,000,000 of the Company's Ten-Year Secured 5% Gold Bonds due October 1, 1941, and $12,753,000 of the Company's First and Refunding Mortgage 5½% Gold Bonds, Series A, due April 1, 2003, the latter two issues to be called for redemption on October 1, 1936 at 103% and 102% respectively, together with accrued interest in all cases. Subject to certain terms and conditions, the Company has agreed to sell to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and the latter has agreed to purchase from the Company the Series E Bonds at 96% plus accrued interest to date of delivery.

EARNINGS The following compilation has been prepared from the Condensed Income Statement of the Company (Exhibit B attached to letter dated June 23, 1936 describing the Bonds) and is subject to the notes forming an integral part of that statement and to the information in the Profit and Loss Statement (Exhibit C attached to said letter).

The First and Refunding Mortgage permits the issuance of additional bonds thereunder which would be equally secured thereby, but closes all existing prior lien mortgages. The Mortgage permits the extension of bonds constituting prior debt to a date not later than January 1, 2003.*

The foregoing is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Circular dated June 25, 1936, and is subject to the more detailed statements therein. The entire Offering Circular should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds. Copies of such Offering Circular may be obtained from the undersigned.

Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed of all legal proceedings in connection with their issue and sale. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive Bonds when prepared, will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about July 7, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

Morgan Stanley & Co. Rail Earnings Seen Best in Six Years

Although rail traffic and earnings remain well below predepression levels, the best full year earnings since 1930 are in prospect for American railroads this year, in the opinion of the F. & B. Industries Reservice, a fortnightly analysis of 28 industries, published by Fenner & Beane.

Qualifying this prospect, the need for large expenditures for deferred maintenance and the continued high level of railroad expenses may keep a portion of the gain in traffic revenues from being transferred to net income, the study states, while the effect of passenger fare cuts and the outcome of pension legislation represent elements of uncertainty in the railroad earnings picture.

We have a position for a man between the ages of 24 and 35. We would prefer a college graduate, although this is not absolutely essential, who has been in the business world for about three years and who as yet has not found exactly the work he wants. In any event he must be aggressive and willing to take responsibility. He should be a natural-born boss and understand that being boss does not consist of being "bossy." This is not selling, but handling people who do sell. It is with one of the oldest and most reliable of local Washington firms. This is not door-to-door selling. The position carries a good starting salary. Advancement is assured, both in position and earnings, to the man who makes good.

Have your reply typewritten, stating age, education and a very comprehensive and detailed account of your experience and the nature of the work you would like to follow in life. Include any other information which you feel would be of value to us. If your qualifications warrant, an interview will be granted within the next few days. Box 83, Washington Post.

Coal Merchants Attend Outing At Bay Ridge

A chilling mist and cloudy skies failed to discourage Washington's coal dealers yesterday as they held their annual outing at Bay Ridge, Md.

The frigid weather found hardy opposition. Some of the coal dealers donned their bathing suits and went swimming. Yesterday was the first time in 11 years that rain has fallen on the annual outing.

More than 300 dealers and their families made the trip, and they stayed until late last night. There were games and athletic contests during the day, and dancing at night. Two meals were served.

Only real victory for the inclement weather was the cancellation of the bathing beauty contest. This was postponed because the judges decided it was too cold for the entrants.

Boys' 50-yard dash — Richard Baldwin.

Girls' potato race—Doris Ryon.

Youth Program Is Told at Parley

A program for a Diocesan Youth movement was outlined yesterday by Miss Tess Marie Gorka, chairman of the youth committee at South Bend, Ind., before the Second Annual Youth Institute of the National Council of Catholic Women.

Miss Gorka suggested study clubs on the subject of youth to stimulate interest of older women working with young people.

Miss Mary M. Finnan, Diocesan Youth chairman of Scranton, Pa., suggested that a particular appeal be made to college graduates, trained in the arts to co-operate by volunteer service.

Mrs. Maurice D. Rosenberg, of the National Amateur Athletic Federation, spoke of the aims of the organization toward extending participation of girls and women in athletics.

The session concluded with a class in games conducted by Miss Marian Abrams, of the Christ Child Society.

Sojourners Meet In Capital Today

The sixteenth annual convention of the National Sojourners opens in Washington today at the Mayflower Hotel with more than 500 delegates from all sections of the country, several foreign countries and ships at sea.

The program for today includes a meeting of the executive committee, Dr. Boliver J. Lloyd, chairman, in the morning; a motor caravan to Mount Vernon in the afternoon, where a wreath will be placed on the tomb of George Washington, and a visit to Quantico, where the delegates will be received by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Lyman, commandant.

Y. W. C. A. Girls' Camp To Be Opened Sunday

Kamp Kahlert, maintained at Sudley, Md., for girls and women of Washington by the Y. W. C. A., will open its thirteenth season Sunday.

The camp accommodates 150 persons and the season this year, it was announced, will last for nine weeks. New features of the program will be a special course in sailing and new water sports.

Irish Post Abolished.

Dublin, June 24 (AP).—President Eamon de Valera announced to the Dail today the office of governor-general, filled by appointment of the King of England, would be abolished in the projected new constitution. Instead, he explained, an elected representative of the people would be the ceremonial head of the state.

4-H Camp Ends; 158 Delegates Off

After a week of sight-seeing and entertainment—with educational lectures sprinkled here and there in the program—158 4-H Club boys and girls were on their way today to their homes in every section of the country and the tents in which they slept on the Washington Monument Grounds were being folded up until another year.

The encampment closed last night with a campfire program.

Yesterday's program, last of the week-long encampment, featured a Nation-wide broadcast of camp activities, a tour of the city and an address by Charles W. Elliot 2d, of the National Resources committee.

BEST UNDER the SUN
Sarthe and Sarthe-St.Croix
Best when lying in charred oak casks on the sunny shores of the sleepy Caribbean—best under our own summer sun in a tall glass with clinking cubes of ice.
Get under the sun with Rhum Sarthe in a cool clinking Collins. Rhum Sarthe makes a stimulating highball, too, and an old-fashioned like bonded whiskey.
For a Daiquiri or the usual rum cocktail insist upon Sarthe-St. Croix. It, too, has that under-the-sun distinctive flavor from the Caribbean.
Any rum aged and mellowed under tropical suns has the punch and character that discriminating drinkers look for.
